KOREAN "PLOT" REPORTED NIPPED

U. N. Has Failed Indonesia Test, Dutch Declare

Report Bloodshed Heavier Than Ever

LAKE SUCCESS, Aug. 22 (AP)—The Netherlands told the Security Council today that the United Nations cease-fire order had only increased bloodshed in Indonesia.

The Dutch then told the council that it must either "send troops" or let the Netherlands alone take measures to restore order.

The announcement that both sides would comply with the council's cease-fire call as of midnight August 4 had been hailed as the council's greatest triumph to date in its peace-keeping efforts.

In a new appeal for the council to take its hands off the Indonesian question, Dr. Eelco N. Van Kleffens, Netherlands representative, declared:

"Dreadful Paradox"

"If you really want the fighting to stop, you must either send troops or allow us to bring about, together with freedom, that security for which millions there are yearning."

He branded the council's efforts a dismal failure and bitterly harged:

"Never was there such killing on the part of the Republican troops and bands since your cease-fire order. It is a strange and dreadful paradox that your cease-fire order has had an effect diametrically opposed to your humane intentions."

Debate on the Indonesian case was resumed this afternoon after a brief hearing of the Egyptian case against Britain over troops in Egypt and the future of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Unable To Reach Compromise

Van Kleffens spoke as the council resumed its consideration of several proposed solutions after behind-the-scene efforts had failed to reach a compromise.

"There is nothing more the council can usefully do," the Dutch Ambassador said.

Off the floor, Sutan Sjahrir, former Indonesian Premier, said that recent reports from Java and the Netherlands "indicate that the Security Council's cease-fire order is hampering projected Dutch military action."

UAW Preserves Ford Union Shop

DETROIT, Aug. 22 (AP)—The Ford Motor Company and the CIO United Auto Workers had a new two-year contract today sidestepping, at union insistence, several stipulations of the new Taft-Hartley labor law but leaving to 107,000 production workers decision as to whether they want an old age pension or a 15-cents an hour wage increase.

The new contract was initialed just 40 seconds before last midnight when the new labor law became effective. By beating the clock the union preserved its union shop rights, outlawed by the Taft-Hartley act unless a majority of the workers voted for it, and also formalized a company promise not to sue the union for unauthorized strikes at least during the year ahead.

The workers themselves, however will decide in a referendum expected to take three weeks, whether they want a pension plan and a seven-cents-an-hour wage hike, or no pension and a wage increase of 11½ cents an hour plus six paid holidays each year.

As tension over the possibility of strike action against the widely-scattered Ford plants was eased, Chrysler Corporation announced that 82 UAW-CIO employees in its Jefferson Avenue plant here had walked out in a "wildcat strike" on the first day of the new Taft-Hartley law. The men returned to their jobs later in the afternoon, however.

Abandon Atcheson Search

HONOLULU, Aug. 22—(AP)—The search for Ambassador George Atcheson, Jr., and four others, missing since a plane crash at sea last Saturday night, will be abandoned at 6 p. m. today, the Hawaiian Sea Frontier said.

TROMBONIST DORSEY FLOORS CLARINETIST GOODMAN AT STUDIO

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22. (AP)—Trombonist Tommy Dorsey today floored Benny Goodman, the clarinet king, in unrehearsed fisticuffs at a recording session, don't-quote-me press agents reported tonight.

Dorsey, as fast with his fists as he is with the sliphorn, knocked Goodman down with a one-two to the chin following hot words over some ad lib notes the clarinetist reportedly interpolated and which caused a remake.

The recording, at the Samuel Goldwyn Studios, was for the sound track of a picture featuring the two musicians, with Trumpeter Louis Armstrong, Saxaphonist Charlie Barnet, and Vibraphonist Lionel Hampton.

Defiant Jewish Refugees Sailing Back To Germany

Refuse To Get Off Vessels In France

PORT DE BOUC, France, Aug. 22—(AP)—The 4,400 Jews of the Exodus, blocked in their efforts to settle in Palestine, ignored a British ultimatum and sailed tonight on three British "cage" ships for Germany, many of them vowing they would not land unless forced.

None of the Jews got off the ships in response to the British government's demand that they disembark in France or be taken to Hamburg, and promptly at 6 p. m. (noon, EST), the British-set deadline, the transports began lifting their anchors and set sail with an escort of three destroyers and a cruiser.

Spokesmen for the Jews aboard the Runnymede Park and Empire Rival, first and last of the ships to sail toward Gibraltar, declared the British would have to carry them off at Hamburg. Spokesmen aboard the Ocean Vigour said they believed they would create no disturbance because of the women and children aboard.

The return to Germany, which many of the Jews had left 10 months ago by various means in an effort to emigrate to the Holy Land, ended a 25-day stay in this French port where the Jews staged a "sit tight" rather than land anywhere but Palestine.

They had spent 42 days aboard crowded ships, having sailed secretly from Sete, France, July 11 for Palestine. Their one-time Chesapeake ferry boat, renamed Exodus 1947, was intercepted by British destroyers which put boarding parties aboard after a bloody fight. The Jews were sent back to France and reached here July 29 where they had remained aboard since, only 100 of the original members consenting to land.

The three-ship convoy and its escort of four war vessels had a four-day voyage to Gibraltar ahead, where a three-day stop will be made for supplies. Then will come a 10-day trip to Hamburg, where International Refugee Organization spokesmen said the Jews will be housed in a displaced persons camp near Belsen, former Nazi concentration camp in the British zone.

National Guard Prepares To Break Camp Today

CAMP RITCHIE, Md., Aug. 22 (AP)—Maryland National Guardsmen collected their pay today and prepared to break camp tomorrow after their first postwar summer training exercises.

Their final day in camp here was punctuated by the roar of 105 millimeter mortars as the 29th Division artillery units banged shells against a mountain on their 600-yard practice range.

It was the first time many of the recruits ever had heard artillery fire.

Pro-Egypt Outbursts Upset U. N.

Two Demonstrators Forcibly Removed

LAKE SUCCESS, Aug. 22 (AP)—Egyptian demonstrations against Britain reached into the decorous halls of the United Nations today in concert with rioting in Cairo.

Demonstrators here twice interrupted the Security Council's deliberations on the Egyptian complaint against Britain over troop withdrawals and the administration of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Husky United Nations guards forcefully dragged the two struggling demonstrators from the crowded council chamber. It was the first time the council's deliberations had ever been disturbed by a spectator outburst.

Youth Demands British Withdrawal

The first disturbance occurred just as Egyptian Premier Nokrashy Pasha took his seat at the council table to deliver a speech in which he turned down a Brazilian proposal calling on Britain and Egypt to make another effort toward settlement of their differences by direct negotiations.

A bearded, red-fezzed youth named Mustafa Momen threw the chamber into confusion by stepping into the aisle and shouting demands for immediate withdrawal of British troops from the Nile Valley.

"Before the discussion opens," he shouted, "I declare that the resumption of negotiations will be forceably rejected by the people of the Nile Valley."

The guards then moved in and dragged him, still shouting, from the chamber.

Second Outburst

The second outburst came near the end of the Egyptian discussion, as British Delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan was concluding a short reply to Nokrashy Pasha.

This time it was the president of the Egyptian Socialist Fellah (farmers) Party, Ahmed Kamel Kotb. He stood up in the audience and shouted:

"Either liberty, or death of international peace. Death of the Security Council. Down with imperialism. Long live the Nile Valley. Long live the king of the Nile Valley."

Guards hustled him outside.

Beckley Newspaper Walkout Is Settled

BECKLEY, W. Va., Aug. 22. (AP)—Herbert Matthews, local president of the International Typographical Union, tonight announced settlement of a one-day strike of 22 printers which had tied up two publications of the Beckley Newspapers Corporation.

Matthews said "all differences were settled to our satisfaction." The differences centered on administration and enforcement of contract sections relating to working conditions, he added.

The night shift on the morning Post-Herald resumed work immediately and the management said it would be published tomorrow.

Conferences On British Economic Crisis Recess

"Technical" Talks To Be Kept Going

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22. (AP)—High-level Anglo-American conferences on Britain's economic crisis recessed suddenly late today, apparently without a decision on Britain's plea for a free hand to trade where she wills but with an agreement to keep "technical" discussions going.

The head men will resume their deliberations later.

Meanwhile Sir Wilfrid Eady and Cameron Cobbold, chiefs of the British delegation to the conferences, planned to return this weekend to London to report progress of the conferences and to discuss "policy requirements." No detail on those requirements was disclosed. Earlier Sir Wilfrid expressed satisfaction over the progress made.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder formally announced the completion on the current phase of the conferences, saying that the British group and the United States National Advisory Council had "explored" problems "arising from the foreign trade programs of the United Kingdom government."

He added that "it was concluded that further consideration should be given to all aspects of these problems by the joint technical working committees."

BLAST IN POLICE BOMB SQUAD LOCKER SHAKES CITY HALL AT PHILLY

Shattering a row of 10 steel lockers in a first floor room of the detective bureau, the explosion sent glass and metal flying in all directions and filled the hall corridors with choking, acidic fumes and smoke.

Deputy Chief Engineer William Simler, of the fire department, one of the first on the scene, said he detected sulphuric acid.

Siegel's Friend Fights For Life

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Aug. 22 (AP)—Virginia Hill hovered between life and the death she feared today, the victim of a mysterious potion which threw her into a comatose condition in the home which she had floodlighted and guarded against gangsters.

A medical bulletin listed her condition as very critical and complicated by pneumonia. It was stated that "the outcome is in doubt at present."

In a medical bulletin tonight, Miss Hill's condition was termed "slightly improved" but "still critical." She was still in coma, the bulletin said, which brought to a total of nearly 43 hours she has been unconscious.

Miss Hill had been bluntly warned by Police Chief P. R. Short that he believed her life in danger, and that the gangsters who on June 20 slew her boy friend, Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, in her Beverly Hills, Calif., home also sought her life.

Chief Short said today that "as far as I could find out, she took an overdose of sleeping pills."

Father Of 10 Runs Off With His Baby Sitter

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 22 (AP) — A father of 10 children and his 18-year-old baby sitter with whom he left home were held by police today at the request of Los Angeles County authorities.

Joseph J. Bray, 37, Bell Gardens, Calif., whose wife said he was "a perfect husband and father who always shared the relief checks with me and the kids," was in jail without charge. So was Betty Jo Roberts, who took care of the children when the mother, Mrs. Gladys Bray, gave birth to her tenth child 22 days ago.

Detective Virgil Lehman quoted Bray as saying he just happened to meet the baby sitter on the street and they decided to leave town together.

NLRB Issues "Fast, Fair" Regulations

Jurisdictional Cases Will Get "Priority"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 (AP)—The National Labor Relations Board tonight announced a set of "fast and fair" rules for settling jurisdictional disputes between unions and handling other cases under the Taft-Hartley Act. The emphasis is on speed.

The new law went fully into effect today, 60 days after its enactment, and unions and employers plowed further into a period of new and confusing problems.

The Labor Department reported about 125,000 workers were involved in 200 strikes yesterday before the law became effective.

Officials said there was a last-minute rush to settle disputes before the midnight deadline on the Taft-Hartley Act, which restricts unions in what they can do and what sort of contracts they can get from employers.

Several settlements were reached literally only a few minutes before midnight, and, in a few cases, representatives of labor and management used the legislative maneuver of "stopping the clock" until agreements were reached.

Union Leaders Noncommittal

Union leaders were still noncommittal on their long-range plans.

The CIO said its nine vice presidents will meet again with President Philip Murray on September 4. The AFL's 13 vice presidents will meet September 8 in Chicago with President William Green. Clearer union policies should emerge from those meetings.

A few cases under the new law began trickling into the 28 NLRB field offices. The pattern probably won't be clear for several days at least.

Robert N. Denham, NLRB general counsel, told a reporter, "We're open for business." He said he is "satisfied" with the NLRB staff and setup, but "nobody has yet nailed up a sign saying 'success'". He refused to make any predictions.

Employers now, for the first time, can file charges of "unfair labor practices" against unions. So can individual employes.

A union can still accuse an employer, provided the union complies with the registration and non-Communist provisions of the act.

The Taft-Hartley Act gives the board power to stop jurisdictional strikes—that is, squabbles between unions over which one will perform

15 Hurt As Car Crashes Wheeling Safety Zone

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 22 (AP)—Fifteen persons were injured, at least seven of them seriously, when an automobile crashed into a street car safety zone crowded with afternoon workers and shoppers here today.

At least three children were among those hurt.

Police Chief Alonzo Hizenbaugh identified the driver of the car as Mrs. Albert A. Frey, 55, St. Clairsville, O. The chief escorted her to police headquarters for questioning, with Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Ihlenfeld also present.

The impact of the car knocked over one of the concrete boxes protecting the safety zone.

14-YEAR-OLD YOUTH LOSES PIGTAILS AS HE GETS FIRST HAIRCUT

CHICAGO, Aug. 22— (AP) — Fourteen-year-old George Estrada, Jr., won't have to put his hair up in pigtails any more when he plays baseball with the other boys—he got his first haircut today.

In 29 minutes and 15 seconds, Barber Herman Pick snipped off and trimmed George's once waist-length tresses.

George's hair was long because when he was younger his mother didn't want it cut and as he grew older—and the hair grew longer—he didn't want it cut.

Urges Introduction Of Free Enterprise

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 (AP) — Mayor George Bauer, of government-owned Greenbelt, Md., told a congressional committee today the town's business is in the hands of a "co-op" monopoly, and recommended the introduction there of "free, competitive private enterprise."

The Mayor made his statement after the Maryland Economic Council asked the committee to solve "the threat to small business stemming from the rapidly developing unfair and un-American competition of the co-ops."

Business Facilities Leased

Bauer said he believes co-operatives "are good" but that he objects to the exclusion of competitive private business from the government-built community of 7,100 population. Without competition, the co-op has been subject to complaints of inefficiency and high prices, he said.

Private business is prevented from operating there, Bauer testified, through a long-term government lease on the business facilities of the community to Greenbelt Consumer Services, Inc., a co-op.

The Mayor said the Greenbelt Town Council voted 4-1 last fall for introduction of private business "to furnish competition to private monopoly."

Bauer testified as the House Small Business Subcommittee on co-ops opened its public hearings on the question whether the government is promoting non-profit "co-op monopolies" to the exclusion of private enterprise.

Use Of "Monopoly" Protested

Dillon S. Myer, commissioner of federal public housing, vigorously protested the use of the word "monopoly" in reference to the Greenbelt arrangement.

He conceded the co-op has the exclusive right to operate businesses in a half-mile radius within the public housing project, but said the leases granted by the government to the co-op are no different from exclusive arrangements granted to various businesses within housing projects developed with private capital.

After Myer had testified, Rep. Patman (D-Tex) said the co-op investigation "has fallen flat on its face." Chairman Ploeser (R-Mo) told reporters "all the evidence shows the government has given a monopoly concession to the co-op at Greenbelt."

Midwest Heat Wave Moves Slowly Eastward

[By The Associated Press]

Friday was another sizzling day for most of the nation east of the Rockies, and particularly for the Midwest where the heat and drought have been virtually continuous for five days.

The Weather Bureau forecaster at Chicago said the end of the mid-western heat wave still was not in sight as temperatures rose again into the 90s and 100s on the plains and in the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys.

The heat wave was moving slowly eastward, and by early afternoon New York City had 86 degrees compared with a maximum of 76 Thursday.

Mass Arrests Are Disclosed By Red Protest

Hodge Links "North" With Wave Of Riots

SEOUL, Korea, Aug. 22 (AP)—Prompted by an extraordinary Soviet complaint, United States authorities announced today the arrest of many Koreans accused of "widespread activity of a revolutionary nature."

Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, commandant of the American-occupied southern half of Korea, made the announcement and pointed cautiously to a tieup between the accused plotters and "the north." But he specifically declined to attribute it to Russian inspiration. The Russians occupy Northern Korea.

A Soviet official statement to the press brought the situation to light this afternoon and led one high American officer to retort that the Russians were "attempting to interfere in the conduct of the government of Southern Korea."

The charges, counter-charges and disclosures in a series of statements and press conferences, were laid against a background of sharp American-Soviet tension over this divided country.

Russia Holds Three GIs

Three American enlisted men who stepped over the line into the Russian zone on August 12 still are held incommunicado by the Soviets, and Russian negotiators have declined to make a joint statement with the Americans on the stalemated efforts to arrange a unified Korean government.

Col. Gen. Terenty F. Shtikov, chief of the Russian delegation in unification negotiations, issued his press statement this afternoon.

He said "mass arrest"? of leftists in Southern Korea in the past 10 days was apparently aimed at "disrupting the work of the joint commission." He demanded "immediate measures for restoration of normal conditions."

In releasing the statement, he said it was identical with a protest he had made at a commission meeting on August 20 (but which was not made public at that time.)

Gen. Hodge then called a press conference and disclosed the "revolutionary" activity.

100 Arrested In Seoul

Hodge said about 100 ringleaders had been arrested in Seoul and an unknown number of others in the provinces on charges of rioting, attacking police boxes and interfering with the government's rice-collection program.

Hodge gave no details except to say that Korean police had made the arrests, and that the "plot" was first discovered early in August among leftist employes of the South Korean radio system.

These employes, the American commandant declared, plotted to inject Communist propaganda into radio programs and to sabotage rightist political speeches.

Although labeling the activity "revolutionary," Hodge insisted the arrests lacked "political significance" because all arrests were in Southern Korea and because "some rightists were arrested, too."

Wildcat Strike Cancels Sailing Of Big U. S. Liner

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 (AP) — The three-day wildcat strike of AFL longshoremen today forced cancellation of the sailing of the liner America, queen of the nation's passenger fleet, and compelled two other passenger ships to delay departure.

The United States Lines, operator of the America, announced arrangements had been made with airlines and the Cunard White Star Line in an effort to provide other transportation to Europe for the 936 stranded passengers.

The America will remain in port until her next scheduled sailing September 10.

The longshoremen's walkout spread to the Brooklyn waterfront today, arousing fears that it might tie up much of the port.

Argentine Proposal Puts "Premium On Fifth Column Attacks," U. S. Says

QUITANDINHA, Brazil, Aug. 22—(AP)—Argentina's proposal that inter-American co-operation against aggression be limited to aggression from outside the hemisphere was opposed by the United States tonight as putting "a premium on fifth column attacks."

The United States' view was expressed in a subcommittee meeting by Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg (R-Mich), of the United States delegation.

Vandenberg said after the meeting that he had not been speaking specifically of the Argentine suggestion but expressing general opposition to the idea of distinguishing between attacks within the hemisphere and those from outside.

In its draft proposal for the inter-American mutual defense treaty being drafted here in the 20-nation Inter-American Defense Conference, Argentina argued strongly for such distinction, demanding that the treaty permit the use of force only in meeting aggression coming from outside the Americas and urging that hemisphere controversies be settled pacifically. The Argentine proposal was submitted last night.

In view of the members of the Argentine delegation, their proposal said, it would be sufficient that signers of the treaty agree "not to resort to use of force in their relations with American states" and "that controversies which arise among them be resolved through means of Pacific solutions established in the inter-American peace system."

A major economic topic was cleared from the conference program when the Steering Committee, at a secret session this morning, rejected by 15 to five Cuba's demand for treaty measures against economic aggression as well as political or military aggression.

Two Bandits Escape After Looting Bank At Windsor, Ont., Of $40,000

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 22 (AP)—Two robbers, one brandishing a submachine gun and the other a pistol, looted the Royal Bank of Canada of an estimated $40,000 today and escaped.

The holdup, in which customers and bank employes were lined up against the wall, took place shortly before the bank's closing hour. It was Windsor's first bank holdup in years.

City, provincial and Canadian Mounted Police threw up road blocks around the city almost immediately in an effort to forestall the robbers' flight from Windsor.

Windsor police recovered the pair's car withir a dozen blocks of the bank in the heart of the city, and identified it as one stolen recently in Guelph, Ont.

Bank Manager A. A. Kinahan said one man entered the front door of the bank, threatening 13 customers and nine employes with a machine gun. The other entered the side door, stuck a pistol in the back of a patron and announced:

"This is a stickup!"

The robber with the machine gun stood guard at the front door until all those in the bank, and two bewildered women customers who interrupted the robbery, were herded against a wall.

The two then hurried along behind the counters emptying cash drawers into a brown bag carried by the pistol-brandishing robber.

The pair then entered the vault and took what cash was readily available, disdaining $60,000 in victory bonds.

Pro-Egypt Outbursts Upset U. N.

Two Demonstrators Forcibly Removed

Demonstrators here twice interrupted the Security Council's deliberations on the Egyptian complaint against Britain over troop withdrawals and the administration of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Husky United Nations guards forcefully dragged the two struggling demonstrators from the crowded council chamber. It was the first time the council's deliberations had ever been disturbed by a spectator outburst.

Youth Demands British Withdrawal

The first disturbance occurred just as Egyptian Premier Nokrashy Pasha took his seat at the council table to deliver a speech in which he turned down a Brazilian proposal calling on Britain and Egypt to make another effort toward settlement of their differences by direct negotiations.

A bearded, red-fezzed youth named Mustafa Momen threw the chamber into confusion by stepping into the aisle and shouting demands for immediate withdrawal of British troops from the Nile Valley.

"Before the discussion opens," he shouted, "I declare that the resumption of negotiations will be forceably rejected by the people of the Nile Valley."

The guards then moved in and dragged him, still shouting, from the chamber.

Second Outburst

The second outburst came near the end of the Egyptian discussion, as British Delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan was concluding a short reply to Nokrashy Pasha.

This time it was the president of the Egyptian Socialist Fellah (farmers) Party, Ahmed Kamel Kotb. He stood up in the audience and shouted:

"Either liberty, or death of international peace. Death of the Security Council. Down with imperialism. Long live the Nile Valley. Long live the king of the Nile Valley."

Guards hustled him outside.

Beckley Newspaper Walkout Is Settled

BECKLEY, W. Va., Aug. 22. (AP)—Herbert Matthews, local president of the International Typographical Union, tonight announced settlement of a one-day strike of 22 printers which had tied up two publications of the Beckley Newspapers Corporation.

Matthews said "all differences were settled to our satisfaction." The differences centered on administration and enforcement of contract sections relating to working conditions, he added.

The night shift on the morning Post-Herald resumed work immediately and the management said it would be published tomorrow.

Conferences On British Economic Crisis Recess

BLAST IN POLICE BOMB SQUAD LOCKER SHAKES CITY HALL AT PHILLY

Shattering a row of 10 steel lockers in a first floor room of the detective bureau, the explosion sent glass and metal flying in all directions and filled the hall corridors with choking, acidic fumes and smoke.

Deputy Chief Engineer William Simler, of the fire department, one of the first on the scene, said he detected sulphuric acid.

"Technical" Talks To Be Kept Going

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22. (AP)—High-level Anglo-American conferences on Britain's economic crisis recessed suddenly late today, apparently without a decision on Britain's plea for a free hand to trade where she wills but with an agreement to keep "technical" discussions going.

The head men will resume their deliberations later.

Meanwhile Sir Wilfrid Eady and Cameron Cobbold, chiefs of the British delegation to the conferences, planned to return this weekend to London to report progress of the conferences and to discuss "policy requirements." No detail on those requirements was disclosed. Earlier Sir Wilfrid expressed satisfaction over the progress made.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder formally announced the completion on the current phase of the conferences, saying that the British group and the United States National Advisory Council had "explored" problems "arising from the foreign trade programs of the United Kingdom government."

He added that "it was concluded that further consideration should be given to all aspects of these problems by the joint technical working committees."

Siegel's Friend Fights For Life

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Aug. 22 (AP)—Virginia Hill hovered between life and the death she feared today, the victim of a mysterious potion which threw her into a comatose condition in the home which she had floodlighted and guarded against gangsters.

A medical bulletin listed her condition as very critical and complicated by pneumonia. It was stated that "the outcome is in doubt at present."

In a medical bulletin tonight, Miss Hill's condition was termed "slightly improved" but "still critical." She was still in coma, the bulletin said, which brought to a total of nearly 43 hours she has been unconscious.

Miss Hill had been bluntly warned by Police Chief P. R. Short that he believed her life in danger, and that the gangsters who on June 20 slew her boy friend, Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, in her Beverly Hills, Calif., home also sought her life.

Chief Short said today that "as far as I could find out, she took an overdose of sleeping pills."

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 22 (AP) — A father of 10 children and his 18-year-old baby sitter with whom he left home were held by police today at the request of Los Angeles County authorities.

Joseph J. Bray, 37, Bell Gardens, Calif., whose wife said he was "a perfect husband and father who always shared the relief checks with me and the kids," was in jail without charge. So was Betty Jo Roberts, who took care of the children when the mother, Mrs. Gladys Bray, gave birth to her tenth child 22 days ago.

Detective Virgil Lehman quoted Bray as saying he just happened to meet the baby sitter on the street and they decided to leave town together.

NLRB Issues "Fast, Fair" Regulations

Jurisdictional Cases Will Get "Priority"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 (AP)—The National Labor Relations Board tonight announced a set of "fast and fair" rules for settling jurisdictional disputes between unions and handling other cases under the Taft-Hartley Act. The emphasis is on speed.

The new law went fully into effect today, 60 days after its enactment, and unions and employers plowed further into a period of new and confusing problems.

The Labor Department reported about 125,000 workers were involved in 200 strikes yesterday before the law became effective.

Officials said there was a last-minute rush to settle disputes before the midnight deadline on the Taft-Hartley Act, which restricts unions in what they can do and what sort of contracts they can get from employers.

Several settlements were reached literally only a few minutes before midnight, and, in a few cases, representatives of labor and management used the legislative maneuver of "stopping the clock" until agreements were reached.

Union Leaders Noncommittal

Union leaders were still noncommittal on their long-range plans.

The CIO said its nine vice presidents will meet again with President Philip Murray on September 4. The AFL's 13 vice presidents will meet September 8 in Chicago with President William Green. Clearer union policies should emerge from those meetings.

A few cases under the new law began trickling into the 28 NLRB field offices. The pattern probably won't be clear for several days at least.

Robert N. Denham, NLRB general counsel, told a reporter, "We're open for business." He said he is "satisfied" with the NLRB staff and set-up, but "nobody has yet nailed up a sign saying 'success'". He refused to make any predictions.

Employers now, for the first time, can file charges of "unfair labor practices" against unions. So can individual employes.

A union can still accuse an employer, provided the union complies with the registration and non-Communist provisions of the act.

The Taft-Hartley Act gives the board power to stop jurisdictional strikes—that is, squabbles between unions over which one will perform

15 Hurt As Car Crashes Wheeling Safety Zone

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 22 (AP)—Fifteen persons were injured, at least seven of them seriously, when an automobile crashed into a street car safety zone crowded with afternoon workers and shoppers here today.

At least three children were among those hurt.

Police Chief Alonzo Hizenbaugh identified the driver of the car as Mrs. Albert A. Frey, 55, St. Clairsville, O. The chief escorted her to police headquarters for questioning, with Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Ihlenfeld also present.

The impact of the car knocked over one of the concrete boxes protecting the safety zone.

14-YEAR-OLD YOUTH LOSES PIGTAILS AS HE GETS FIRST HAIRCUT

CHICAGO, Aug. 22— (AP) — Fourteen-year-old George Estrada, Jr., won't have to put his hair up in pigtails any more when he plays baseball with the other boys—he got his first haircut today.

In 29 minutes and 15 seconds, Barber Herman Pick snipped off and trimmed George's once waist-length tresses.

George's hair was long because when he was younger his mother didn't want it cut and as he grew older—and the hair grew longer—he didn't want it cut.

Urges Introduction Of Free Enterprise

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 (AP) — Mayor George Bauer, of government-owned Greenbelt, Md., told a congressional committee today the town's business is in the hands of a "co-op" monopoly, and recommended the introduction there of "free, competitive private enterprise."

The Mayor made his statement after the Maryland Economic Council asked the committee to solve "the threat to small business stemming from the rapidly developing unfair and un-American competition of the co-ops."

Business Facilities Leased

Bauer said he believes co-operatives "are good" but that he objects to the exclusion of competitive private business from the government-built community of 7,100 population. Without competition, the co-op has been subject to complaints of inefficiency and high prices, he said.

Private business is prevented from operating there, Bauer testified, through a long-term government lease on the business facilities of the community to Greenbelt Consumer Services, Inc., a co-op.

The Mayor said the Greenbelt Town Council voted 4-1 last fall for introduction of private business "to furnish competition to private monopoly."

Bauer testified as the House Small Business Subcommittee on co-ops opened its public hearings on the question whether the government is promoting non-profit "co-op monopolies" to the exclusion of private enterprise.

Use Of "Monopoly" Protested

Dillon S. Myer, commissioner of federal public housing, vigorously protested the use of the word "monopoly" in reference to the Greenbelt arrangement.

He conceded the co-op has the exclusive right to operate businesses in a half-mile radius within the public housing project, but said the leases granted by the government to the co-op are no different from exclusive arrangements granted to various businesses within housing projects developed with private capital.

After Myer had testified, Rep. Patman (D-Tex) said the co-op investigation "has fallen flat on its face." Chairman Ploeser (R-Mo) told reporters "all the evidence shows the government has given a monopoly concession to the co-op at Greenbelt."

Midwest Heat Wave Moves Slowly Eastward

[By The Associated Press]

Friday was another sizzling day for most of the nation east of the Rockies, and particularly for the Midwest where the heat and drought have been virtually continuous for five days.

The Weather Bureau forecaster at Chicago said the end of the mid-western heat wave still was not in sight as temperatures rose again into the 90s and 100s on the plains and in the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys.

The heat wave was moving slowly eastward, and by early afternoon New York City had 86 degrees compared with a maximum of 76 Thursday.

Mass Arrests Are Disclosed By Red Protest

Hodge Links "North" With Wave Of Riots

SEOUL, Korea, Aug. 22 (AP)—Prompted by an extraordinary Soviet complaint, United States authorities announced today the arrest of many Koreans accused of "widespread activity of a revolutionary nature."

Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, commandant of the American-occupied southern half of Korea, made the announcement and pointed cautiously to a tieup between the accused plotters and "the north." But he specifically declined to attribute it to Russian inspiration. The Russians occupy Northern Korea.

A Soviet official statement to the press brought the situation to light this afternoon and led one high American officer to retort that the Russians were "attempting to interfere in the conduct of the government of Southern Korea."

The charges, counter-charges and disclosures in a series of statements and press conferences, were laid against a background of sharp American-Soviet tension over this divided country.

Russia Holds Three GIs

Three American enlisted men who stepped over the line into the Russian zone on August 12 still are held incommunicado by the Soviets, and Russian negotiators have declined to make a joint statement with the Americans on the stalemated efforts to arrange a unified Korean government.

Col. Gen. Terenty F. Shtikov, chief of the Russian delegation in unification negotiations, issued his press statement this afternoon.

He said "mass arrest" of leftists in Southern Korea in the past 10 days was apparently aimed at "disrupting the work of the joint commission." He demanded "immediate measures for restoration of normal conditions."

In releasing the statement, he said it was identical with a protest he had made at a commission meeting on August 20 (but which was not made public at that time.)

Gen. Hodge then called a press conference and disclosed the "revolutionary" activity.

100 Arrested In Seoul

Hodge said about 100 ringleaders had been arrested in Seoul and an unknown number of others in the provinces on charges of rioting, attacking police boxes and interfering with the government's rice-collection program.

Hodge gave no details except to say that Korean police had made the arrests, and that the "plot" was first discovered early in August among leftist employes of the South Korean radio system.

These employes, the American commandant declared, plotted to inject Communist propaganda into radio programs and to sabotage rightist political speeches.

Although labeling the activity "revolutionary," Hodge insisted the arrests lacked "political significance" because all arrests were in Southern Korea and because "some rightists were arrested, too."

Wildcat Strike Cancels Sailing Of Big U. S. Liner

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 (AP) — The three-day wildcat strike of AFL longshoremen today forced cancellation of the sailing of the liner America, queen of the nation's passenger fleet, and compelled two other passenger ships to delay departure.

The United States Lines, operator of the America, announced arrangements had been made with airlines and the Cunard White Star Line in an effort to provide other transportation to Europe for the 936 stranded passengers.

The America will remain in port until her next scheduled sailing September 10.

The longshoremen's walkout spread to the Brooklyn waterfront today, arousing fears that it might tie up much of the port.

Two Bandits Escape After Looting Bank At Windsor, Ont., Of $40,000

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 22 (AP)—Two robbers, one brandishing a submachine gun and the other a pistol, looted the Royal Bank of Canada of an estimated $40,000 today and escaped.

The holdup, in which customers and bank employes were lined up against the wall, took place shortly before the bank's closing hour. It was Windsor's first bank holdup in years.

City, provincial and Canadian Mounted Police threw up road blocks around the city almost immediately in an effort to forestall the robbers' flight from Windsor.

Windsor police recovered the pair's car withir a dozen blocks of the bank, in the heart of the city, and identified it as one stolen recently in Guelph, Ont.

Bank Manager A. A. Kinahan said one man entered the front door of the bank, threatening 13 customers and nine employes with a machine gun. The other entered the side door, stuck a pistol in the back of a patron and announced:

"This is a stickup!"

The robber with the machine gun stood guard at the front door until all those in the bank, and two bewildered women customers who interrupted the robbery, were herded against a wall.

The two then hurried along behind the counters emptying cash drawers into a brown bag carried by the pistol-brandishing robber.

The pair then entered the vault and took what cash was readily available, disdaining $60,000 in victory bonds.

Argentine Proposal Puts "Premium On Fifth Column Attacks," U. S. Says

QUITTANDINHA, Brazil, Aug. 22—(AP)—Argentina's proposal that inter-American co-operation against aggression be limited to aggression from outside the hemisphere was opposed by the United States tonight as putting "a premium on fifth column attacks."

The United States' view was expressed in a subcommittee meeting by Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg (R-Mich), of the United States delegation.

Vandenberg said after the meeting that he had not been speaking specifically of the Argentine suggestion but expressing general opposition to the idea of distinguishing between attacks within the hemisphere and those from outside.

In its draft proposal for the inter-American mutual defense treaty being drafted here in the 20-nation Inter-American Defense Conference, Argentina argued strongly for such distinction, demanding that the treaty permit the use of force only in meeting aggression coming from outside the Americas and urging that hemisphere controversies be settled pacifically. The Argentine proposal was submitted last night.

In view of the members of the Argentine delegation, their proposal said, it would be sufficient that signers of the treaty agree "not to resort to use of force in their relations with American states" and "that controversies which arise among them be resolved through means of Pacific solutions established in the inter-American peace system."

A major economic topic was cleared from the conference program when the Steering Committee, at a secret session this morning, rejected by 15 to five Cuba's demand for treaty measures against economic aggression as well as political or military aggression.

AIRPLANE CRASH NEAR SOMERSET KILLS PILOT

SOMERSET, Pa., Aug. 22 (AP)—A man identified by the coroner's office and state police as Chesney Quentin Voigt, 40, but whose address has not been definitely established, was killed late today as his airplane crashed in a small field near here.

Deputy Coroner C. T. Saylor said Voigt is believed to be from New Salem, Ill.

State police said several addresses were found among Voigt's effects. Among them was one on a letter addressed to him at 242 East 62nd Street, New York.

The investigating officer said maps in the two-place plane indicated Voigt was en route to Washington from West Salem.

NLRB Issues

certain work—and to settle the disputes. Here is the procedure laid down tonight:

Individual Can File Charges

1. Charges against a union for engaging in or encouraging a jurisdictional dispute can be filed not only by an employer but also by any individual whatever.

2. Jurisdictional cases will be given "priority."

3. When a charge is filed in a regional office, the regional director makes a quick investigation and if he thinks further proceedings are in order, he holds a hearing within 10 days. The parties have this 10 days to settle their own dispute or arrange for settlement. If they don't, a hearing is held to get the "pertinent facts" on the record.

4. The board in Washington receives this record and makes a decision as to which employes shall perform a particular work.

5. Then the regional director confers with the parties and if satisfied they will comply, he dismisses the charge, and the case is over.

6. If the parties are not complying with the board's verdict, the regional director issues a formal complaint against the non-complying union and from then on it is handled like any other "unfair labor practice" case—with ultimate court enforcement if necessary.

with the advisory council, which lasted less than an hour.

He said the continuing technical discussions will be only a part of a series of consultations between the two governments with the expectation "that high-level discussions will be resumed at an appropriate time."

Presumably, this will come in September when Snyder goes to London to participate in a meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Bank.

AIRPLANE CRASH NEAR SOMERSET KILLS PILOT

SOMERSET, Pa., Aug. 22 (AP)—A man identified by the coroner's office and state police as Chesney Quentin Voigt, 40, but whose address has not been definitely established, was killed late today as his airplane crashed in a small field near here.

Deputy Coroner C. T. Saylor said Voigt is believed to be from New Salem, Ill.

State police said several addresses were found among Voigt's effects. Among them was one on a letter addressed to him at 242 East 62nd Street, New York.

The investigating officer said maps in the two-place plane indicated Voigt was en route to Washington from West Salem.

NLRB Issues

certain work—and to settle the disputes. Here is the procedure laid down tonight:

Individual Can File Charges

1. Charges against a union for engaging in or encouraging a jurisdictional dispute can be filed not only by an employer but also by any individual whatever.

2. Jurisdictional cases will be given "priority."

3. When a charge is filed in a regional office, the regional director makes a quick investigation and if he thinks further proceedings are in order, he holds a hearing within 10 days. The parties have this 10 days to settle their own dispute or arrange for settlement. If they don't, a hearing is held to get the "pertinent facts" on the record.

4. The board in Washington receives this record and makes a decision as to which employes shall perform a particular work.

5. Then the regional director confers with the parties and if satisfied they will comply, he dismisses the charge, and the case is over.

6. If the parties are not complying with the board's verdict, the regional director issues a formal complaint against the non-complying union and from then on it is handled like any other "unfair labor practice" case—with ultimate court enforcement if necessary.

Sales Tax Collections Pass $1,500,000 Mark

BALTIMORE, Aug. 22 (AP)—Although sales tax receipts for July still were incomplete they had surpassed today the $1,500,000 required monthly to produce the anticipated yearly return of $18,400,000, the State Comptroller's office reported.

Walter E. Kennedy, chief of the sales tax division, said collections from approximately 37,500 returns totaled $1,511,100. More than 44,330 licenses are held by Maryland businessmen.

with the advisory council, which lasted less than an hour.

He said the continuing technical discussions will be only a part of a series of consultations between the two governments with the expectation "that high-level discussions will be resumed at an appropriate time."

Conflict May Cause City Revenue Drop

Cumberland may lose some anticipated revenue from the state because of fiscal year conicts, and some curtailments may be in order, according to City Auditor Arthur B. Gibson.

Gibson said he had estimated that approximately $20,000 would be received in license fees but now it appears that this amount will not be realized because the city fiscal year started in April and the state's in July, while the county's trader license period began May 1.

Inasmuch as most of the traders' licenses were obtained before July 1 the city will not share in the full amount as provided by a new legislative act.

The city is experiencing the same difficulty in regard to race track returns. It had been anticipated that at least $50,000 would be received but so far only about $23,000 is in sight.

A bright spot in the picture is furnished by state income tax returns. In this field the city levied only $9,000 and has received $22,720, an excess of $13,720.32 and it is expected the amount will go slightly higher.

The city financial report for the period ending July 31, the first third of the year, shows $694,810.83 out of an anticipated $889,330 received. The only excess in revenue is from state income tax.

A total of $695,430 was appropriated for operating expenses and $222,811.51 has been expended, slightly less than one-third of the full amount.

The debt service appropriation was $193,900 and $118,340 has been expended.

$3,000,000 Ready For Out-Patient Clinics

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The United States Public Health Service has $3,000,000 available to assist states in setting up an out-patient mental clinic for each 100,000 persons.

An out-patient clinic is one that the patient visits the same as he calls on a doctor.

Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran says this goal is not immediately attainable because of shortage of personnel to operate the clinics.

Train Stewardess-Nurse

BALTIMORE, Aug. 22—(AP)—Passengers on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad's Royal Blue, crack New York-Washington train, will be provided with stewardess-nurse service after August 25, General Passenger Traffic Manager J. F. Whittington announced.

At one time Sir Richard Arkwright, English inventor of cotton-spinning machinery, was so poor that he needed to be furnished with a suit of clothes before he could appear to vote at an election as a burgess of Preston, his home town.

Tanganyika Aids Diamond Market

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Tanganyika territory in Africa has suddenly become one of the world's largest producers of diamonds, with more than 100,000 carats yearly.

This is enough, says Gems and Gemology, publication of the Gemological Institute of America, to improve the world's diamond situation by 1948 or 1949. There is at present a great diamond demand.

The year 1945 reached an all-time peak in production of diamonds with 14,250,000 carats.

Sir Richard Arkwright (1732-92), was celebrated for his invention of cotton-spinning machinery. He was born in Preston, Lancashire, England, the youngest of 13 children and was bred to the trade of a barber.

People Of Britain Are Now Paying The Fiddler

Now that the British government is using the new wartime powers which Parliament granted it, the people of the country are in the unhappy state of getting precisely the opposite of what they thought—if they thought at all—they voted for. They put the Labor Party in power because it promised them freedom, social reforms, shorter hours and more pay.

Today they are living in a dictatorship with even their normal liberties curtailed.

They have been sentenced to work harder and for no greater return. Instead of having more amusements open to them, theirs is literally a life of austerity. Instead of having more to eat, they have less.

All this has happened before in the world's history and probably will happen again. The men and women who plotted and suffered to turn Russia into a communist state did it in order that they might lose what they called their chains. Today they are infinitely more securely shackled than they were in the old days.

A new government, which they imagined could be democratic, became and remains as rigid and cruel an autocracy as has ever been known. Its citizens have no right to independence of thought or action.

Socialism as practiced by the British Labor government has not yet gone to the length of communism. But at the moment the people living in either system are undergoing approximately identical experiences.

But as this picture unfolds before the people of Great Britain, Winston Churchill, who stood up to Hitler alone during 18 months of war, is now standing up for his Conservative principles in his postwar Socialistic nation.

Many Conservative spokesmen in Britain have joined the "me, too" school—like certain Republican presidential candidates in the United States in recent years. They realize that the Labor Party was swept into power two years ago with big majority. They have noted the consistent Labor victories in by-elections. Therefore, they have trimmed their political sails to the Socialist wind. Today they propose doing much the same things as the Attlee cabinet, only they would "do them better."

Churchill does not belong to that company. He believes in free enterprise and is not afraid to say so. He thinks the Laborite experiments in nationalizing basic industries have been a failure, and that the failure has, inevitably, pushed the government toward more rigid controls over individual workers and employers. His speech from his home the other day was a vigorous statement of principle.

"I am sure," said Churchill, "that it is only by personal effort, free enterprise and ingenuity—with all its risks of failures, unequal prizes and rewards—that anything like 47,000,000 people can keep themselves alive in this small island."

Attlee has been attacking capital. Churchill would attack monopoly in all its forms. Like every true believer in free enterprise he would root out "restrictive practices of all kinds," whether in government or industry. Denouncing forms of industrial conscription now proposed by the Labor cabinet, Churchill asks, "Wasn't this the very kind of thing we fought against in the war?"

The retort of Laborites is that Churchill himself headed the war government which imposed drastic restrictions upon British labor and industry. But Churchill led a coalition cabinet, a government which represented all parties. The measures he put into effect were emergency measures of the kind that every nation, everywhere, would resort to when threatened by alien conquest and the loss of its freedom and national independence.

Churchill was trying to save his country from a disastrous invasion. He was not conducting a class war at home or seeking to transform the nation's economy under the excuse of national emergency.

Time For Inventory Of School Teachers

The good old golden rule days are a few days distant, but the present moment is not too early for those entrusted with the education of children to take inventory of their equipment for their all-important task.

Recently Paul A. Witty, director of the psycho-educational clinic of Northwestern University, conducted a survey to ascertain "what's the matter with teacher?" In doing so he went to the persons most likely to speak with authority on the subject—the children themselves. Here are some of the faults some of the children found in some of the teachers:

Ill temper, intolerance, unfairness, favoritism, lack of interest in the individual pupil, making unreasonable demands, gloominess, unfriendliness, sarcasm, inconsistency, instability, impatience, inflexibility, talking excessively, talking down to the child, being overbearing, conceit and lack of a sense of humor.

It is bad enough to encounter any of these faults in a person in any other walk of life, but it is tragic when they are found in teachers because of the incalculable harm they inflict on the child in his most impressionable years.

Hence, it would not be out of order for teacher to take inventory now and carefully scan the list of faults with a view to avoiding one and all on returning to the classroom.

Twelve Tons Of Push

Imagine 19,200 horses hitched to a single chariot. That gives a rough idea of the power developed by the six jet engines of the new XB-48. Built for the Army Air Forces and now undergoing ground and flight tests, this plane is the largest multijet bomber of conventional design ever constructed.

Designed for long-range flights at speeds approaching the velocity of sound, this Martin-built job boasts 24,000 pounds of thrust. That's a maximum power greater than the pull of two giant locomotives, each hauling a string of 125 freight cars.

Jet engines are rated in pounds of thrust rather than horsepower. Yet when this new plane is loafing along at a mere 300 miles an hour—less than half its maximum speed—it develops 19,200 horsepower.

In the controversy over housing no one has given much attention to the well-known dove of peace, which must be growing tired of hovering.

APPETITE IN CHILDREN

"MY CHILD won't eat," is a common complaint. The mother is not particularly concerned when the situation follows a cold or other acute malady since she knows that after the youngster is up and about he will again enjoy his meals. Now and then, however, a mild infection lingers, keeping the little one somewhat under par. If appetite does not return when it should, a search must be made for minor colonies of bacteria. Food allergies cannot be overlooked. Many lifelong reactions to certain foods date back to childhood. Occasionally local disorders in the mouth such as tiny ulcers or cavities in the teeth will be to blame. A prominent cause of anorexia is poor hygiene including eating between meals, lack of exercise, too much excitement, and irregular hours.

Nature is kind to children in not giving them too great sense of responsibility before they are old enough to assume it. But sometimes parents induce anxiety by forcing the boy or girl to excel in everything. This tends to dampen appetite. Many are subjected to considerable mental strain by carrying a heavy schedule of activities. Between school work, outside classes in music, dramatics, dancing, and swimming every minute is taken and there is little time left for ordinary play.

But even in the households where common sense is exercised, the "won't-eat" child is often a problem. If no physical reason can be found, investigation of psychic causes is indicated. In most instances it is the parents who need reeducation. Mother is too solicitous about her offspring's welfare and since it is only human to rebel against authority, the tot does just that. In the old days of large families, eating was on a competitive basis and the youngster learned that if he did not move fast, he was out of luck. Now, the only chick knows that he will be coaxed, cajoled and conciliated. He is the center of attention and even scolding and punishment means that he has the spotlight.

Sometimes, after a convalescent diet, the child is actually fearful of eating normally. Others are bothered by the constant admonition—hurry! Still others are made unhappy by a discussion of their misdeeds at the table. An important psychological factor is the attitude of the parents. Children identify themselves with loved ones and if mom or dad speaks disparagingly of a certain dish, junior will follow suit.

Dawdling is another annoying behavior problem. Selling and Ferraro believe that one reason for the practice is some kind of shortcoming or failure in the home situation. It may be lack of parental affection or a goal at the end of the meal. The habit is most common between the ages of 4 and 6 and usually, after the child gets to kindergarten or school, appetite and attitude improve as he becomes more active physically and mentally. In some cases, too much food is served. Others become so absored in the conversation and laughter of the grownups that eating becomes a prosaic chore.

These marks are know as "striae" and develop over areas where the skin has been stretched or distended. They often appear on the abdomen following pregnancy and elsewhere in certain types of obesity.

The procedure is not accepted by all physicians as many claim that it may encourage sinus infection. Some individuals are not harmed provided a week solution is used and it is not done regularly.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

The city of Seattle is sending an SOS to the Pied Piper of Hamlin. The town is being overrun by 250,000 rats, and no one knows where they came from. It's either a convention or Walt Disney extras have gotten out of hand.

Seattle has tried everything, but nothing helps. The rats are being produced faster than Hopalong Cassidy pictures. Even the cats have to sneak through the back alleys. They are afraid to walk the streets alone. Some guy built a better mousetrap, and what happens? The mice are beating his door down.

The rats have really taken over the town. In fact, they don't live in sewers anymore; they've taken apartments. The mayor tried passing a law to exterminate them, and the rate voted him out of office. No kidding, when a Seattle wife asks her husband if he's a mouse or a man he says: "I'm a mouse. I want to stay with the majority."

They did try one thing that almost worked. Fifty thousand rats committed suicide, but then they ran out of Crosby records. The folks there can't use mousetraps. They have to go to bed with a whip and a chair.

You may think I'm joking, but it's really a serious problem. In fact Seattle was last reported heading toward Portland.

THE MOLOTOV PLAN IS ALREADY IN OPERATION

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

New Book By General Montgomery Is Mass Of Omissions And Half Truths; He Glosses Over Own Errors For Self-Glorification

Says ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 — The Washington Merry-Go-Round this week awards its brass ring—in reverse.

Recipient of the Bob-tailed decoration is Field Marshal Bernard L. Montgomery. Occasion: The distribution in the U. S. by the British Information Service of Montgomery's amazing post-operational report of the war in the ETO.

Bearing the quaint title of "Dispatch," the report is an astounding concoction of misstatements of fact, half truths, innuendos, omissions, and self-glorification.

That Montgomery should compose this kind of a document is not remarkable. On the basis of past performances, the report is wholly in character. What is remarkable is that the British government should not only permit the report to see the light of day, but to distribute it in this country at this time. Its publication is a blunder as offensive and provocative as Montgomery's extraordinary opus.

It is traditional that high-level post-operational reports are not noted for complete candor. Frequently, they are more illuminating in what they omit and gloss over than in what they actually relate.

The reports of Generals Marshall and Eisenhower, published last year, displayed marked symptoms of this occupational disease. Hanson Baldwin, veteran military analyst of the New York Times, sharply criticized the Eisenhower report on this score. Baldwin particularly ridiculed Eisenhower's bland claim that everything in the ETO had gone "according to plan."

But, while tainted with considerable mumbo-jumbo lily-gilding, the Marshall and Eisenhower reports were dignified and restrained. They were meticulously accurate on the details that were covered, all participants were studiously given full recognition, and the perpendicular pronoun was used sparingly and modestly. As far as the reports went, they were gentlemanly and soldierly.

Mr. Fix-It

Montgomery's report is inaccurate, vainglorious, petty, and mischievous.

On the very first page is an extraordinary misstatement of fact. Montgomery declares "Headquarters Twelfth U. S. Army Group were formed in London. . . ." that is not so. Headquarters Twelfth U.S. Army Group did not come into existence until just before the jump-off of the Third U.S. Army's epic break-out of the Cotentin through the Avranches corridor. The U. S. Army group headquarters set up in London was the First (FUSAG). Months later, when this headquarters became operational under General Omar Bradley, it was secretly redesignated the Twelfth for deception purposes.

Immediately on the heels of this misstatement of fact, Montgomery, on the next page, makes an even more extraordinary pronouncement. He lays claim to sole and complete authorship of the assault plan of Operation Overlord. "My plan," he says flatly and unequivocally.

The basic outline of this plan was agreed upon before Montgomery reached London in January, 1944. And a number of senior commanders participated in working out the details of the plan. A large part of the first chapter of Eisenhower's report consists of a detailed account of the evolution of this plan. Eisenhower makes it crystal-clear that the report was the result of many lengthy conferences, in which Montgomery was only one of a number of participants, and that changes were frequent and far-reaching. Eisenhower repeatedly uses the expression "our decisions," as it was only decent and honorable for him to do under the circumstances.

In striking contrast, Montgomery not only lays categoric claim to full authorship of the plan, but, in keeping with his self-proclaimed proprietorship, makes only three fleeting references to Eisenhower in the first forty-four pages (one-half) of the "Despatch." And only one of them is by name. In the other instances, Eisenhower is referred to merely as the "supreme commander."

Passing The Buck

There is another very significant, and characteristic, aspect to the references to Eisenhower in Montgomery's report.

The first time the "supreme commander" is singled out for marked attention is on page 45 in an italicized precede summarizing the operations beginning with September 1, 1944. This was the beginning of the tragic period of the war in the ETO. The period that started with the order, at Montgomery's vehement insistence, halting Patton on the Mozell, when his Third Army had in front of it only a decimated and disorganized enemy and an unmanned Siegfried Line barring the way to the Rhine.

Nazi Germany could have been conquered before winter if Patton's blasting tankers and slashing doughboys had not been sat down so that Montgomery could launch his costly and abortive offensive in the North. This ill-conceived and bungled campaign was a defeat surpassed only by the Ardennes disaster. And it was this period, also, that witnessed the bloody Hurtgen Forest battle, the period that culminated finally in the Ardennes disaster.

It is of more than passing note, therefore, that Montgomery should single out the "supreme commander" for special mention in this particular portion of the "Despatch," especially in view of the manner in which the reference is made. Says Montgomery, "In September the supreme commander assumed command and direction of the army groups himself. . . ." this will be very interesting news to Eisenhower. According to his report, he was in personal command of all army groups from the jump-off of the invasion.

Amazing Omissions

There is much more of this sort of thing in the "Despatch." But the most amazing feature of the report is its omissions and half truths. The report is filled with them from start to finish. The following are a few of the more outstanding:

Not one mention of the heroic role played by the Maquis in the liberation of France and not a single word about the 11 French divisions that fought so gallantly on the Southern flank of the Western front.

The ridiculous statement that "The battle of Normandy was fought exactly as planned before the invasion." The real facts are that Montgomery suffered a crushing defeat at Caen, losing the bulk of his armor when he attempted to drive head-on through the densely hedge-rowed "bocage" that was heavily fortified with massed German artillery.

The amazing omission of any mention of the immortal Battle of Bastogne, where Third Army paratroopers and tankers broke the back of Hitler's counter-offensive.

The omission of any word about the destruction of an entire German army group by Third and Seventh U. S. Armies in eight days in the Palantinate; a victory that broke the back of German resistance on the Rhine and shortened the war by many months.

There was plenty of glory in the war in the ETO to cover all participants with acclaim and decorations from head to foot. Why Field Marshal Montgomery considered it necessary to be niggardly in his official report is something only he can explain. But that kind of "tidying up" does not foster good will and understanding.

THESE DAYS By George E. Sokolsky

THESE are not the right kind of days for a row, certainly not under these New England maples where life seems eternally just right. Up here in Sandisfield, world confusions have in no manner obtruded themselves upon my neighbors, who are mightily puzzled that no matter how much stone they pull out of the ground, more stone appears after each frost.

Nevertheless, I cannot avoid wondering how the other half lives, so I read "The Daily Worker." That keeps me informed about the doings of Henry Wallace and Vito Marcantonio and why the United States isn't any good. I can't help thinking as I sit up here, near the Burgoyne Trail where the French and Indian war was fought and not far from the road that General Knox cut through the forest to bring the artillery from Fort Ticonderoga to Boston in the Revolutionary War, that if I thought as badly of this country as those who write for "The Daily Worker" do, I would get me a one-way ticket to some other place.

Be that as it may, I find in the sheet before me an article by David Platt on Jimmy Cagney whom I, like millions of other Americans, have enjoyed in the movies. It seems that Cagney is producing a movie based on Saroyan's "The Time of your Life." Why Cagney does this is his business, but Platt seems to feel that Cagney is spoiling Saroyan, which must be hard to do.

Anyhow, according to Platt, at a recent P.C.A. meeting in Los Angeles, Paul Draper, who dances fancifully, sometimes even to the accompaniment of a harmonica, notified the reds and pinkos there assembled that Cagney is a bad boy because he is distorting Saroyan. It seems that Draper was ordered to substitute Stalin for Hitler in a line, on account of Hitler being dead and they are two of a kind, and there is no use talking about a ghost. Draper danced an objection and somebody proposed that Molotov's name be used.

But, this also according to Platt, somebody called Sidney Bernstein, who belongs to an English outfit run by J. Arthur Rank, told Draper " . . . that his organization would refuse to handle a film which had a line in it offensive to the Soviet Union. He said further that if 'The Time of Your Life' was released with either the name of Stalin or Molotov in it, it would do practically no business anywhere in Europe."

In other words, Draper makes the point which Platt repeats and which I pass along as Platt's that Bernstein undertook to veto an American film on behalf of an English outfit for political reasons. Jimmy Cagney, who seems in the films to be a tough baby, didn't slap down Draper, Bernstein, et al, because business is business and maybe this Bernstein really has the low-down on what's what in the film business. So, anyhow, they canned Hitler, Stalin and Molotov and stuck in the name Kilroy—an anonymous guy, who can't veto anything.

But, says Platt, that ain't all. Cagney, being shrewd, two-timed Draper, Bernstein and even Platt and made two versions, one for this country using Molotov and one for Europe using Kilroy. So the Europeans will wonder who is this Kilroy and they will reach the conclusion that he must be a big shot, running for vice president like Harold Stassen.

Platt wants "a contemporary reactionary or fascist." "Now. who do you think that contemporary reactionary or fascist would be? Maybe they would say Rankin, because when the Commies can't think of anyone else to knock down, they call whomever they dislike Rankin, which has become a trademark with them. Or maybe they would say Harry Truman, because I read another piece in which they are demanding that the Democrats should not run him for president but instead should take on Henry Wallace, who is more pleasing, they say.

Anyhow, it is all right to make fun of any American—but not Molotov. Soon we shall have a censorship in Hollywood to make sure that nobody hurts the feelings of the 40 or 50 members of UN. Only American feelings are to be hurt.

Yesterday Was Emancipation Day For U. S. Workingmen

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Today is emancipation day for the American workingman. Today a law goes into effect which says the worker cannot be pushed around by employers or unions. The worker can now join or refrain from joining a union and get protection from the law of the land.

The Taft-Hartley Act, however, reaffirms all the rights that workers had under the Wagner law and adds many rights besides.

Thus, if there is a picket line and a man or woman wants to go inside a factory to work, he or she can do so. If anyone interferes, the person coerced can obtain legal redress first through the National Labor Relations Board and then by damage suits in the courts.

Likewise, a union which engages pickets to do acts which are in violation of the law can be held responsible by damage suits and by injunction obtained by the labor board.

No longer can unions use "goon squads" or "strong arm" methods either to enforce their will or to intimidate people into joining a union. The worker is free to decide as he wishes. That specifically is stated in the law.

If a worker is a member of a "closed shop" or "union shop," he may have to remain a member of the union during the term of the contract but no worker, whether a member of the union or not, is compelled to engage in picketing if he does not care to do so. He has a legal right to refrain from union activities and cannot be dismissed from a union for refusal to do that which is unlawful.

Need Not Be Reinstated

The worker as an individual can quit his job at any time. The union cannot bring about his re-employment if he has quit in disregard of union orders. If he quits in accordance with union orders and the union itself has failed to give the proper notice of an intention to strike, the worker need not be reinstated by the employer. If the union orders him to engage in an unlawful strike, he can sue the union.

Thus the right to strike by concerted action is protected so long as proper notices are given but the right to persuade others to quit in a concerted movement is not protected if the proper notices have not been given in advance. This it what is meant by the prohibition against "wildcat strikes."

The law merely insists that work stoppages be conducted in an orderly manner—somewhat as was the case under the Smith-Connally law in wartime when certain prescribed steps had to be complied with before a strike could occur.

The worker has obtained another important legal right. He can insist on a financial statement by his union. Unless the union supplies this to members each year, it loses certain privileges before the National Labor Relations Board. Some unions which do not want to tell their members what they are doing with the workers' money are talking of "avoiding" the National Labor Relations Board. This, however, does not in any way save them from the penalties if they engage in unlawful strikes or work stoppages—those where proper notice has not been given.

The worker has a vote now on whether there shall or shall not be a "union shop" in the plant. This is not the same as being represented by a union for collective bargaining. It means that if a majority of the employees have voted for the "union shop," which bars non-union workers, after 30 days the new employee must join the union to keep his job and the old employees must also become members of the union.

But an old employee who has refused to become a member of the union cannot be dismissed by the employer when he offers to join and the union declines to admit him. He must agree to pay the regular dues just the same.

Cannot Force Dismissals

The new law says unions may prescribe their own rules of admission but cannot force dismissals of members who pay their dues. In other words, the days of discrimination against union men for failing to be beholden to union officers or for exercising their right to speak up in union meetings is over. The union cannot compel an employer even in a union shop it dismiss such an employee.

No longer is the threat to compel an employer to fire a worker going to be held over the head of a union member who does a satisfactory job of work for the employer each day but happens to be in disfavor with the union officers.

The Taft-Hartley law has been denounced by union "bosses" who have never told the workers what the new law means to them. Gradually the truth about the new statute will become known to the workers and they will then regard it as a statute that truly emancipates them from unjust action by either the union or the employer in the matter of union activities.

Stipulation In British Contract Loan Dropped; Is Unworkable

By MARK SULLIVAN

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, after three days of conference at Washington with British officials, announced that we are releasing Britain from a detail of the contract by which she borrowed 3 3-4 billion dollars from us.

Merely to state what we have done is to enter an extremely complex field, currencies and international exchange. To put it as simply as is practicable, Britain need no longer pay out any of the dollars we loaned her to nations which have pounds and want dollars in exchange for them.

Because the obligation on Britain to do this was a part (though only a part) of her impending economic crisis, and because crisis in Britain would with practical certainty mean crisis for us and the world, there was within official Washington during the negotiations now ended a spirit of tension and anxiety. The tension is now eased, but only for the moment.

What we have done is, in words used by Under Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett, a "temporary expedient." It is not only temporary but also partial. The obligation of Britain to pay out dollars in exchange for pounds was only a part, a comparatively small part, of her impending crisis as a whole.

Will Probably Give Further Aid

We will probably give Britain further financial aid, perhaps in the form of a loan from our government-owned Export-Import Bank. But that would be only a matter of one or two hundred million dollars, not much more than a drop in the bucket of Britain's need. Almost certainly there will shortly be proposals that we make a new loan to Britain, of an amount such as can only be made by act of Congress. And again it is necessary to bear in mind the scope of Britain's crisis. Even a large loan to Britain, while it would certainly help materially, could not be counted on with any absolute certainty as an over-all cure for Britain's crisis. That crisis has several causes, some with deep reaching root. Besides, the crisis of Britain, because of the immense place she has in international trade, is inter-related with the danger of worldwide crisis and collapse, to the averting of which we have pledged ourselves through the Marshall plan and the Truman doctrine.

Looking upon our easing this week of the burden of our loan to Britain, by releasing her from the obligation to exchange dollars for pounds—looking on this as a step standing alone, there is anxious inquiry about its immediate effect. Some are reasonably probable. Because Britain has need to conserve her dollars, and also need to economize in every way, she will probably be reluctant to use her store of dollars to buy goods from us. Steps she has already taken mean that she will buy less tobacco for America, import fewer motion pictures from us, buy less food from us. The same will be true of many other kinds of goods.

So far as Britain is obliged to buy abroad, she will naturally prefer to buy from countries which do not call for dollars in payment, which are willing to accept pounds and which customarily make use of pounds in international trade, such as the British dominions and many other countries. This will work changes in the pattern of international trade throughout the world. A policy on the part of Britain of not freely giving dollars in exchange for pounds to all who desire such exchange may possibly cause some dislocation of the existing relation between pounds and dollars. If that should take place and be extensive it might be serious.

Entire Problem "Complicated"

But all that is said here or may be said anywhere, about the effects of what Britain and the United States did this week about the pound and the dollar, is uncertain, speculation about it futile. For it is in the field of international exchange, and that is, as Under Secretary of State Lovett, himself an experienced banker, said this week, "terribly complicated." Any happening in international exchange has ramifications that are literally unforeseeable. One that is expected to be damaging may in fact turn out to be beneficient, and of course vice versa. Not even the most expert economists or fiscal authorities can foresee.

This is perhaps the most dependable deduction that can be made from the developments this week. The fallability of the most expert and the best-intentioned is vividly proved by what is now taking place.

The existing loan to Britain was arranged, somewhat over a year ago, by representatives of Britain and the United States who included fiscal experts of the highest standing. They spent weeks upon the contract, devoted their highest intelligence to it. Into it they wrote a stipulation about exchange of dollars into pounds, thinking of course that it would be practicable and useful. It is this stipulation which today is found to be unworkable and dangerous and necessary to change.

People Of Britain Are Now Paying The Fiddler

Now that the British government is using the new wartime powers which Parliament granted it, the people of the country are in the unhappy state of getting precisely the opposite of what they thought—if they thought at all—they voted for. They put the Labor Party in power because it promised them freedom, social reforms, shorter hours and more pay.

Today they are living in a dictatorship with even their normal liberties curtailed.

They have been sentenced to work harder and for no greater return. Instead of having more amusements open to them, theirs is literally a life of austerity. Instead of having more to eat, they have less.

All this has happened before in the world's history and probably will happen again. The men and women who plotted and suffered to turn Russia into a communist state did it in order that they might lose what they called their chains. Today they are infinitely more securely shackled than they were in the old days.

A new government, which they imagined could be democratic, became and remains as rigid and cruel an autocracy as has ever been known. Its citizens have no right to independence of thought or action.

Socialism as practiced by the British Labor government has not yet gone to the length of communism. But at the moment the people living in either system are undergoing approximately identical experiences.

But as this picture unfolds before the people of Great Britain, Winston Churchill, who stood up to Hitler alone during 18 months of war, is now standing up for his Conservative principles in his postwar Socialistic nation.

Many Conservative spokesmen in Britain have joined the "me, too" school—like certain Republican presidential candidates in the United States in recent years. They realize that the Labor Party was swept into power two years ago with big majority. They have noted the consistent Labor victories in by-elections. Therefore, they have trimmed their political sails to the Socialist wind. Today they propose doing much the same things as the Attlee cabinet, only they would "do them better."

Churchill does not belong to that company. He believes in free enterprise and is not afraid to say so. He thinks the Laborite experiments in nationalizing basic industries have been a failure, and that the failure has, inevitably, pushed the government toward more rigid controls over individual workers and employers. His speech from his home the other day was a vigorous statement of principle.

"I am sure," said Churchill, "that it is only by personal effort, free enterprise and ingenuity—with all its risks of failures, unequal prizes and rewards—that anything like 47,000,000 people can keep themselves alive in this small island."

Attlee has been attacking capital. Churchill would attack monopoly in all its forms. Like every true believer in free enterprise he would root out "restrictive practices of all kinds," whether in government or industry. Denouncing forms of industrial conscription now proposed by the Labor cabinet, Churchill asks, "Wasn't this the very kind of thing we fought against in the war?"

The retort of Laborites is that Churchill himself headed the war government which imposed drastic restrictions upon British labor and industry. But Churchill led a coalition cabinet, a government which represented all parties. The measures he put into effect were emergency measures of the kind that every nation, everywhere, would resort to when threatened by alien conquest and the loss of its freedom and national independence.

Churchill was trying to save his country from a disastrous invasion. He was not conducting a class war at home or seeking to transform the nation's economy under the excuse of national emergency.

Time For Inventory Of School Teachers

The good old golden rule days are a few days distant, but the present moment is not too early for those entrusted with the education of children to take inventory of their equipment for their all-important task.

Recently Paul A. Witty, director of the psycho-educated clinic of Northwestern University, conducted a survey to ascertain "what's the matter with teacher?" In doing so he went to the persons most likely to speak with authority on the subject—the children themselves. Here are some of the faults some of the children found in some of the teachers:

Ill temper, intolerance, unfairness, favoritism, lack of interest in the individual pupil, making unreasonable demands, gloominess, unfriendliness, sarcasm, inconsistency, instability, impatience, inflexibility, talking excessively, talking down to the child, being overbearing, conceit and lack of a sense of humor.

It is bad enough to encounter any of these faults in a person in any other walk of life, but it is tragic when they are found in teachers because of the incalculable harm they inflict on the child in his most impressionable years.

Hence, it would not be out of order for teacher to take inventory now and carefully scan the list of faults with a view to avoiding one and all on returning to the classroom.

Twelve Tons Of Push

Imagine 19,200 horses hitched to a single chariot. That gives a rough idea of the power developed by the six jet engines of the new XB-48. Built for the Army Air Forces and now undergoing ground and flight tests, this plane is the largest multijet bomber of conventional design ever constructed.

Designed for long-range flights at speeds approaching the velocity of sound, this Martin-built job boasts 24,000 pounds of thrust. That's a maximum power greater than the pull of two giant locomotives, each hauling a string of 125 freight cars.

Jet engines are rated in pounds of thrust rather than horsepower. Yet when this new plane is loafing along at a mere 300 miles an hour—less than half its maximum speed—it develops 19,200 horsepower.

In the controversy over housing no one has given much attention to the well-known dove of peace, which must be growing tired of hovering.

APPETITE IN CHILDREN

"MY CHILD won't eat," is a common complaint. The mother is not particularly concerned when the situation follows a cold or other acute malady since she knows that after the youngster is up and about he will again enjoy his meals. Now and then, however, a mild infection lingers, keeping the little one somewhat under par. If appetite does not return when it should, a search must be made for minor colonies of bacteria. Food allergies cannot be overlooked. Many lifelong reactions to certain foods date back to childhood. Occasionally local disorders in the mouth such as tiny ulcers or cavities in the teeth will be to blame. A prominent cause of anorexia is poor hygiene including eating between meals, lack of exercise, too much excitement, and irregular hours.

Nature is kind to children in not giving them too great sense of responsibility before they are old enough to assume it. But sometimes parents induce anxiety by forcing the boy or girl to excel in everything. This tends to dampen appetite. Many are subjected to considerable mental strain by carrying a heavy schedule of activities. Between school work, outside classes in music, dramatics, dancing, and swimming every minute is taken and there is little time left for ordinary play.

But even in the households where common sense is exercised, the "won't-eat" child is often a problem. If no physical reason can be found, investigation of psychic causes is indicated. In most instances it is the parents who need reeducation. Mother is too solicitous about her offspring's welfare and since it is only human to rebel against authority, the tot does just that. In the old days of large families, eating was on a competitive basis and the youngster learned that if he did not move fast, he was out of luck. Now, the only chick knows that he will be coaxed, cajoled and conciliated. He is the center of attention and even scolding and punishment means that he has the spotlight.

Sometimes, after a convalescent diet, the child is actually fearful of eating normally. Others are bothered by the constant admonition—hurry! Still others are made unhappy by a discussion of their misdeeds at the table. An important psychological factor is the attitude of the parents. Children identify themselves with loved ones and if mom or dad speaks disparagingly of a certain dish, junior will follow suit.

Dawdling is another annoying behavior problem. Selling and Ferraro believe that one reason for the practice is some kind of shortcoming or failure in the home situation. It may be lack of parental affection or a goal at the end of the meal. The habit is most common between the ages of 4 and 6 and usually, after the child gets to kindergarten or school, appetite and attitude improve as he becomes more active physically and mentally. In some cases, too much food is served. Others become so absored in the conversation and laughter of the grownups that eating becomes a prosaic chore.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

The city of Seattle is sending an SOS to the Pied Piper of Hamlin. The town is being overrun by 250,000 rats, and no one knows where they came from. It's either a convention or Walt Disney extras have gotten out of hand.

Seattle has tried everything, but nothing helps. The rats are being produced faster than Hopalong Cassidy pictures. Even the cats have to sneak through the back alleys. They are afraid to walk the streets alone. Some guy built a better mousetrap, and what happens? The mice are beating his door down.

The rats have really taken over the town. In fact, they don't live in sewers anymore; they've taken apartments. The mayor tried passing a law to exterminate them, and the rate voted him out of office. No kidding, when a Seattle wife asks her husband if he's a mouse or a man he says: "I'm a mouse. I want to stay with the majority."

They did try one thing that almost worked. Fifty thousand rats committed suicide, but then they ran out of Crosby records. The folks there can't use mousetraps. They have to go to bed with a whip and a chair.

You may think I'm joking, but it's really a serious problem. In fact Seattle was last reported heading toward Portland.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

New Book By General Montgomery Is Mass Of Omissions And Half Truths; He Glosses Over Own Errors For Self-Glorification

Says ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 — The Washington Merry-Go-Round this week awards its brass ring—in reverse.

Recipient of the Bob-tailed decoration is Field Marshal Bernard L. Montgomery. Occasion: The distribution in the U. S. by the British Information Service of Montgomery's amazing post-operational report of the war in the ETO.

Bearing the quaint title of "Dispatch," the report is an astounding concoction of misstatements of fact, half truths, innuendos, omissions, and self-glorification.

That Montgomery should compose this kind of a document is not remarkable. On the basis of past performances, the report is wholly in character. What is remarkable is that the British government should not only permit the report to see the light of day, but to distribute it in this country at this time. Its publication is a blunder as offensive and provocative as Montgomery's extraordinary opus.

It is traditional that high-level post-operational reports are not noted for complete candor. Frequently, they are more illuminating in what they omit and gloss over than in what they actually relate.

The reports of Generals Marshall and Eisenhower, published last year, displayed marked symptoms of this occupational disease. Hanson Baldwin, veteran military analyst of the New York Times, sharply criticized the Eisenhower report on this score. Baldwin particularly ridiculed Eisenhower's bland claim that everything in the ETO had gone "according to plan."

But, while tainted with considerable mumbo-jumbo lily-gilding, the Marshall and Eisenhower reports were dignified and restrained. They were meticulously accurate on the details that were covered, all participants were studiously given full recognition, and the perpendicular pronoun was used sparingly and modestly. As far as the reports went, they were gentlemanly and soldierly.

Mr. Fix-It

Montgomery's report is inaccurate, vainglorious, petty, and mischievous.

On the very first page is an extraordinary misstatement of fact. Montgomery declares "Headquarters Twelfth U. S. Army Group were formed in London. . . ." that is not so. Headquarters Twelfth U.S. Army Group did not come into existence until just before the jump-off of the Third U.S. Army's epic break-out of the Cotentin through the Avranches corridor. The U. S. Army group headquarters set up in London was the First (FUSAG). Months later, when this headquarters became operational under General Omar Bradley, it was secretly redesignated the Twelfth for deception purposes.

Immediately on the heels of this misstatement of fact, Montgomery, on the next page, makes an even more extraordinary pronouncement. He lays claim to sole and complete authorship of the assault plan of Operation Overlord. "My plan," he says flatly and unequivocally.

The basic outline of this plan was agreed upon before Montgomery reached London in January, 1944. And a number of senior commanders participated in working out the details of the plan. A large part of the first chapter of Eisenhower's report consists of a detailed account of the evolution of this plan. Eisenhower makes it crystal-clear that the report was the result of many lengthy conferences, in which Montgomery was only one of a number of participants, and that changes were frequent and far-reaching. Eisenhower repeatedly uses the expression "our decisions," as it was only decent and honorable for him to do under the circumstances.

In striking contrast, Montgomery not only lays categoric claim to full authorship of the plan, but, in keeping with his self-proclaimed proprietorship, makes only three fleeting references to Eisenhower in the first forty-four pages (one-half) of the "Despatch." And only one of them is by name. In the other instances, Eisenhower is referred to merely as the "supreme commander."

Passing The Buck

There is another very significant, and characteristic, aspect to the references to Eisenhower in Montgomery's report.

The first time the "supreme commander" is singled out for marked attention is on page 45 in an italicized precede summarizing the operations beginning with September 1, 1944. This was the beginning of the tragic period of the war in the ETO. The period that started with the order, at Montgomery's vehement insistence, halting Patton on the Mozell, when his Third Army had in front of it only a decimated and disorganized enemy and an unmanned Siegfried Line barring the way to the Rhine.

Nazi Germany could have been conquered before winter if Patton's blasting tankers and slashing doughboys had not been sat down so that Montgomery could launch his costly and abortive offensive in the North. This ill-conceived and bungled campaign was a defeat surpassed only by the Ardennes disaster. And it was this period, also, that witnessed the bloody Hurtgen Forest battle, the period that culminated finally in the Ardennes disaster.

It is of more than passing note, therefore, that Montgomery should single out the "supreme commander" for special mention in this particular portion of the "Despatch," especially in view of the manner in which the reference is made. Says Montgomery, "In September the supreme commander assumed command and direction of the army groups himself. . . ." this will be very interesting news to Eisenhower. According to his report, he was in personal command of all army groups from the jump-off of the invasion.

Amazing Omissions

There is much more of this sort of thing in the "Despatch." But the most amazing feature of the report is its omissions and half truths. The report is filled with them from start to finish. The following are a few of the more outstanding:

Not one mention of the heroic role played by the Maquis in the liberation of France and not a single word about the 11 French divisions that fought so gallantly on the Southern flank of the Western front.

The ridiculous statement that "The battle of Normandy was fought exactly as planned before the invasion." The real facts are that Montgomery suffered a crushing defeat at Caen, losing the bulk of his armor when he attempted to drive head-on through the densely hedge-rowed "bocage" that was heavily fortified with massed German artillery.

The amazing omission of any mention of the immortal Battle of Bastogne, where Third Army paratroopers and tankers broke the back of Hitler's counter-offensive.

The omission of any word about the destruction of an entire German army group by Third and Seventh U. S. Armies in eight days in the Palantinate; a victory that broke the back of German resistance on the Rhine and shortened the war by many months.

There was plenty of glory in the war in the ETO to cover all participants with acclaim and decorations from head to foot. Why Field Marshal Montgomery considered it necessary to be niggardly in his official report is something only he can explain. But that kind of "tidying up" does not foster good will and understanding.

THESE DAYS

By George E. Sokolsky

THESE are not the right kind of days for a row, certainly not under these New England maples where life seems eternally just right. Up here in Sandisfield, world confusions have in no manner obtruded themselves upon my neighbors, who are mightily puzzled that no matter how much stone they pull out of the ground, more stone appears after each frost.

Nevertheless, I cannot avoid wondering how the other half lives, so I read "The Daily Worker." That keeps me informed about the doings of Henry Wallace and Vito Marcantonio and why the United States isn't any good. I can't help thinking as I sit up here, near the Burgoyne Trail where the French and Indian war was fought and not far from the road that General Knox cut through the forest to bring the artillery from Fort Ticonderoga to Boston in the Revolutionary War, that if I thought as badly of this country as those who write for "The Daily Worker" do, I would get me a one-way ticket to some other place.

Be that as it may, I find in the sheet before me an article by David Platt on Jimmy Cagney whom I, like millions of other Americans, have enjoyed in the movies. It seems that Cagney is producing a movie based on Saroyan's "The Time of your Life." Why Cagney does this is his business, but Platt seems to feel that Cagney is spoiling Saroyan, which must be hard to do.

Anyhow, according to Platt, at a recent P.C.A. meeting in Los Angeles, Paul Draper, who dances fancifully, sometimes even to the accompaniment of a harmonica, notified the reds and pinkos there assembled that Cagney is a bad boy because he is distorting Saroyan. It seems that Draper was ordered to substitute Stalin for Hitler in a line, on account of Hitler being dead and they are two of a kind, and there is no use talking about a ghost. Draper danced an objection and somebody proposed that Molotov's name be used.

But, this also according to Platt, somebody called Sidney Bernstein, who belongs to an English outfit run by J. Arthur Rank, told Draper ". . . that his organization would refuse to handle a film which had a line in it offensive to the Soviet Union. He said further that if 'The Time of Your Life' was released with either the name of Stalin or Molotov in it, it would do practically no business anywhere in Europe."

In other words, Draper makes the point which Platt repeats and which I pass along as Platt's that Bernstein undertook to veto an American film on behalf of an English outfit for political reasons. Jimmy Cagney, who seems in the films to be a tough baby, didn't slap down Draper, Bernstein, et al, because business is business and maybe this Bernstein really has the low-down on what's what in the film business. So, anyhow, they canned Hitler, Stalin and Molotov and stuck in the name Kilroy—an anonymous guy, who can't veto anything.

But, says Platt, that ain't all. Cagney, being shrewd, two-timed Draper, Bernstein and even Platt and made two versions, one for this country using Molotov and one for Europe using Kilroy. So the Europeans will wonder who is this Kilroy and they will reach the conclusion that he must be a big shot, running for vice president like Harold Stassen.

Platt wants "a contemporary reactionary or fascist." "Now, who do you think that contemporary reactionary or fascist would be? Maybe they would say Rankin, because when the Commies can't think of anyone else to knock down, they call whomever they dislike Rankin, which has become a trademark with them. Or maybe they would say Harry Truman, because I read another piece in which they are demanding that the Democrats should not run him for president but instead should take on Henry Wallace, who is more pleasing, they say.

Anyhow, it is all right to make fun of any American—but not Molotov. Soon we shall have a censorship in Hollywood to make sure that nobody hurts the feelings of the 40 or 50 members of UN. Only American feelings are to be hurt.

Yesterday Was Emancipation Day For U. S. Workingmen

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Today is emancipation day for the American workingman. Today a law goes into effect which says the worker cannot be pushed around by employers or unions. The worker can now join or refrain from joining a union and get protection from the law of the land.

The Taft-Hartley Act, however, reaffirms all the rights that workers had under the Wagner law and adds many rights besides.

Thus, if there is a picket line and a man or woman wants to go inside a factory to work, he or she can do so. If anyone interferes, the person coerced can obtain legal redress first through the National Labor Relations Board and then by damage suits in the courts.

Likewise, a union which engages pickets to do acts which are in violation of the law can be held responsible by damage suits and by injunction obtained by the labor board.

No longer can unions use "goon squads" or "strong arm" methods either to enforce their will or to intimidate people into joining a union. The worker is free to decide as he wishes. That specifically is stated in the law.

If a worker is a member of a "closed shop" or "union shop," he may have to remain a member of the union during the term of the contract but no worker, whether a member of the union or not, is compelled to engage in picketing if he does not care to do so. He has a legal right to refrain from union activities and cannot be dismissed from a union for refusal to do that which is unlawful.

Need Not Be Reinstated

The worker as an individual can quit his job at any time. The union cannot bring about his re-employment if he has quit in disregard of union orders. If he quits in accordance with union orders and the union itself has failed to give the proper notice of an intention to strike, the worker need not be reinstated by the employer. If the union orders him to engage in an unlawful strike, he can sue the union.

Thus the right to strike by concerted action is protected so long as proper notices are given but the right to persuade others to quit in a concerted movement is not protected if the proper notices have not been given in advance. This it what is meant by the prohibition against "wildcat strikes."

The law merely insists that work stoppages be conducted in an orderly manner—somewhat as was the case under the Smith-Connally law in wartime when certain prescribed steps had to be complied with before a strike could occur.

The worker has obtained another important legal right. He can insist on a financial statement by his union. Unless the union supplies this to members each year, it loses certain privileges before the National Labor Relations Board. Some unions which do not want to tell their members what they are doing with the workers' money are talking of "avoiding" the National Labor Relations Board. This, however, does not in any way save them from the penalties if they engage in unlawful strikes or work stoppages—those where proper notice has not been given.

The worker has a vote now on whether there shall or shall not be a "union shop" in the plant. This is not the same as being represented by a union for collective bargaining. It means that if a majority of the employees have voted for the "union shop," which bars non-union workers, after 30 days the new employee must join the union to keep his job and the old employees must also become members of the union.

But an old employee who has refused to become a member of the union cannot be dismissed by the employer when he offers to join and the union declines to admit him. He must agree to pay the regular dues just the same.

Cannot Force Dismissals

The new law says unions may prescribe their own rules of admission but cannot force dismissals of members who pay their dues. In other words, the days of discrimination against union men for failing to be beholden to union officers or for exercising their right to speak up in union meetings is over. The union cannot compel an employer even in a union shop it dismiss such an employee.

No longer is the threat to compel an employer to fire a worker going to be held over the head of a union member who does a satisfactory job of work for the employer each day but happens to be in disfavor with the union officers.

The Taft-Hartley law has been denounced by union "bosses" who have never told the workers what the new law means to them. Gradually the truth about the new statute will become known to the workers and they will then regard it as a statute that truly emancipates them from unjust action by either the union or the employer in the matter of union activities.

Stipulation In British Contract Loan Dropped; Is Unworkable

By MARK SULLIVAN

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, after three days of conference at Washington with British officials, announced that we are releasing Britain from a detail of the contract by which she borrowed 3 3-4 billion dollars from us.

Merely to state what we have done is to enter an extremely complex field, currencies and international exchange. To put it as simply as is practicable, Britain need no longer pay out any of the dollars we loaned her to nations which have pounds and want dollars in exchange for them.

Because the obligation on Britain to do this was a part (though only a part) of her impending economic crisis, and because crisis in Britain would with practical certainty mean crisis for us and the world, there was within official Washington during the negotiations now ended a spirit of tension and anxiety. The tension is now eased, but only for the moment.

What we have done is, in words used by Under Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett, a "temporary expedient." It is not only temporary but also partial. The obligation of Britain to pay out dollars in exchange for pounds was only a part, a comparatively small part, of her impending crisis as a whole.

Will Probably Give Further Aid

We will probably give Britain further financial aid, perhaps in the form of a loan from our government-owned Export-Import Bank. But that would be only a matter of one or two hundred million dollars, not much more than a drop in the bucket of Britain's need. Almost certainly there will shortly be proposals that we make a new loan to Britain, of an amount such as can only be made by act of Congress. And again it is necessary to bear in mind the scope of Britain's crisis. Even a large loan to Britain, while it would certainly help materially, could not be counted on with any absolute certainty as an over-all cure for Britain's crisis. That crisis has several causes, some with deep reaching root. Besides, the crisis of Britain, because of the immense place she has in international trade, is inter-related with the danger of worldwide crisis and collapse, to the averting of which we have pledged ourselves through the Marshall plan and the Truman doctrine.

Looking upon our easing this week of the burden of our loan to Britain, by releasing her from the obligation to exchange dollars for pounds—looking on this as a step standing alone, there is anxious inquiry about its immediate effect. Some are reasonably probable. Because Britain has need to conserve her dollars, and also need to economize in every way, she will probably be reluctant to use her store of dollars to buy goods from us. Steps she has already taken mean that she will buy less tobacco for America, import fewer motion pictures from us, buy less food from us. The same will be true of many other kinds of goods.

So far as Britain is obliged to buy abroad, she will naturally prefer to buy from countries which do not call for dollars in payment, which are willing to accept pounds and which customarily make use of pounds in international trade, such as the British dominions and many other countries. This will work changes in the pattern of international trade throughout the world. A policy on the part of Britain of not freely giving dollars in exchange for pounds to all who desire such exchange may possibly cause some dislocation of the existing relation between pounds and dollars. If that should take place and be extensive it might be serious.

Entire Problem "Complicated"

But all that is said here or may be said anywhere, about the effects of what Britain and the United States did this week about the pound and the dollar, is uncertain, speculation about it futile. For it is in the field of international exchange, and that is, as Under Secretary of State Lovett, himself an experienced banker, said this week, "terribly complicated." Any happening in international exchange has ramifications that are literally unforeseeable. One that is expected to be damaging may in fact turn out to be beneficient, and of course vice versa. Not even the most expert economists or fiscal authorities can foresee.

This is perhaps the most dependable deduction that can be made from the developments this week. The fallability of the most expert and the best-intentioned is vividly proved by what is now taking place.

The existing loan to Britain was arranged, somewhat over a year ago, by representatives of Britain and the United States who included fiscal experts of the highest standing. They spent weeks upon the contract, devoted their highest intelligence to it. Into it they wrote a stipulation about exchange of dollars into pounds, thinking of course that it would be practicable and useful. It is this stipulation which today is found to be unworkable and dangerous and necessary to change.

Social Security Urges Survivors To File Claims

The Social Security Administration is concerned regarding the loss of benefit payments to persons who, because of ignorance of the law, neglect to file claims for Old Age and Survivors Insurance, according to William W. Wood, Jr., manager of the field office here.

For instance, Mr. Wood explained, a few days ago a woman called at this office. Her husband died over a year ago, but she had neglected to come to the office to file a claim because she could not find her husband's Social Security card. Because of this delay, he said, she lost several hundred dollars of benefits for herself and her minor child.

It is not necessary to have the Social Security number of a deceased person to file a claim for benefits. If the card is available it should be brought to the office, but if the card cannot be found, one should come in and file the claim without it.

The Social Security Administration is paying benefits to certain survivors of World War II veterans who died within three years of their discharge from the armed forces who were never employed under the Social Security Act. These payments are not made, however, if a pension is being received from the Veterans Administration, he said.

Many persons have misinterpreted this provision of the law. They believe that if they are receiving compensation from the Veterans Administration, no payment can be made to them under the Social Security Act.

If the deceased wage earner had sufficient employment under the Social Security Act to reach an insured status before going into the armed forces, benefit payments may be made to his survivors even though they are now receiving compensation from the Veterans Administration.

The third way in which benefit payments are lost occurs when a person already 65 years old or over is not employed for wages of $15 or more in any one month and neglects to file a claim for his old-age insurance benefits for that month. The lost time may be for sickness or any other reason, but the wage earner must file his claim before the end of the third month after the month in which he did not earn $15 or more.

Railroad Freight Rates Increased

Under an Interstate Commerce Order, which was upheld by the Supreme Court, an increase of 10 per cent in "class rates" for railroad shipment became effective at midnight Thursday.

The increase is effective in the area north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers and east of the Mississippi river. Rates in the South and parts of the West have been reduced. The increase is effective for all "class rates" as published officially by the railroads but does not cover commodity rates or exceptions.

Social Security Urges Survivors To File Claims

The Social Security Administration is concerned regarding the loss of benefit payments to persons who, because of ignorance of the law, neglect to file claims for Old Age and Survivors Insurance, according to William W. Wood, Jr., manager of the field office here.

For instance, Mr. Wood explained, a few days ago a woman called at this office. Her husband died over a year ago, but she had neglected to come to the office to file a claim because she could not find her husband's Social Security card. Because of this delay, he said, she lost several hundred dollars of benefits for herself and her minor child.

It is not necessary to have the Social Security number of a deceased person to file a claim for benefits. If the card is available it should be brought to the office, but if the card cannot be found, one should come in and file the claim without it.

The Social Security Administration is paying benefits to certain survivors of World War II veterans who died within three years of their discharge from the armed forces who were never employed under the Social Security Act. These payments are not made, however, if a pension is being received from the Veterans Administration, he said.

Many persons have misinterpreted this provision of the law. They believe that if they are receiving compensation from the Veterans Administration, no payment can be made to them under the Social Security Act.

If the deceased wage earner had sufficient employment under the Social Security Act to reach an insured status before going into the armed forces, benefit payments may be made to his survivors even though they are now receiving compensation from the Veterans Administration.

The third way in which benefit payments are lost occurs when a person already 65 years old or over is not employed for wages of $15 or more in any one month and neglects to file a claim for his old-age insurance benefits for that month. The lost time may be for sickness or any other reason, but the wage earner must file his claim before the end of the third month after the month in which he did not earn $15 or more.

Grant Paces Jockeys, Six Favorites Win

Catcher's Error Enables Dodgers To Conquer Reds

Brooklyn Captures 12-Inning Tilt, 6-5

BROOKLYN, Aug. 22 (AP)—An error by Catcher Ray Lamanno enabled the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers to defeat the Cincinnati Reds, 6-5 in 12 innings today.

Dixie Walker scored the winning run. Walker opened the frame with a double, his fourth hit. Pee Wee Reese bunted but was automatically out when he stepped on the ball. Walker moved to third on Stan Rojek's infield hit and dashed plateward when Al Gionfriddo bounced to shortstop Eddie Miller.

Miller's throw to the plate had Walker beat but Lamanno dropped the ball after Walker ran into him. Box:

Notes From Fairgo

The Manley Memorial, named in honor of Harry A. Manley, late president and general manager of the fair association, will feature today's program at Fairgo. The race will be a sprint over five furlongs and will be the sixth on the Elks' day card as the meeting reaches the halfway mark.

It rained so hard during the second and third races yesterday that the water descending from Knobley Mountain across the river in West Virginia resembled great falls.

Fairgo is alive with touts this year. The fans are entitled to better protection from those policing the grounds. It is understood the fair association pays a big fee to rid the track of touts yet they are as thick as flies.

Ron Light was claimed in the seventh race yesterday by Mrs. E. B. Lee. The price tag on the brown filly was $900. A. L. Leith, Jr., trains Mrs. Lee's horses.

As yesterday's fourth race got under way a dog dashed down the muddy track from the finish line to the gate at the club hourse turn. Wonder if the clockers timed him? Maybe Fido read about quarter horses trimming thoroughbreds.

Cushlamachee, twice winner of White Handicap, has been bred on the farm of her owner, John Foster, at Brunswick, Md., and is expected to foal early next year.

The big days next week are: American Legion Day, Tuesday; Cumberland Day, Wednesday; Eagles Day, Thursday, and Johnstown Day, Friday.

Entries will close today for the Clifton W. White Handicap, which will be the fifth race next Wednesday—"Cumberland Day."

Grant Paces Jockeys, Six Favorites Win

TIGERS TURN TABLES

DETROIT, Aug. 22. (AP)—The Detroit Tigers retaliated against the Washington Senators today, paying back yesterday's double defeat from the visitors by sweeping a bargain bill, 7 to 6 and 2 to 0.

Young Houtteman, former Detroit sandlotter, won his first starting victory of the season in the nightcap as he blanked the Senators on five hits and drove in one of his team's runs himself.

The Tigers climbed on starter Walt Masterson and two other Senator twirlers for all their seven runs in the ninth inning in snatching the opener. Dick Wertz hit a three-run homer in the big rally. Box:

Catcher's Error Enables Dodgers To Conquer Reds

Brooklyn Captures 12-Inning Tilt, 6-5

BROOKLYN, Aug. 22 (AP)—An error by Catcher Ray Lamanno enabled the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers to defeat the Cincinnati Reds, 6-5 in 12 innings today.

Dixie Walker scored the winning run. Walker opened the frame with a double, his fourth hit. Pee Wee Reese bunted but was automatically out when he stepped on the ball. Walker moved to third on Stan Rojek's infield hit and dashed plateward when Al Gionfriddo bounced to shortstop Eddie Miller.

Miller's throw to the plate had Walker beat but Lamanno dropped the ball after Walker ran into him. Box:

Notes From Fairgo

The Manley Memorial, named in honor of Harry A. Manley, late president and general manager of the fair association, will feature today's program at Fairgo. The race will be a sprint over five furlongs and will be the sixth on the Elks' day card as the meeting reaches the halfway mark.

It rained so hard during the second and third races yesterday that the water descending from Knobley Mountain across the river in West Virginia resembled great falls.

Fairgo is alive with touts this year. The fans are entitled to better protection from those policing the grounds. It is understood the fair association pays a big fee to rid the track of touts yet they are as thick as flies.

Ron Light was claimed in the seventh race yesterday by Mrs. E. B. Lee. The price tag on the brown filly was $900. A. L. Leith, Jr., trains Mrs. Lee's horses.

As yesterday's fourth race got under way a dog dashed down the muddy track from the finish line to the gate at the club hourse turn. Wonder if the clockers timed him? Maybe Fido read about quarter horses trimming thoroughbreds.

Cushlamachee, twice winner of White Handicap, has been bred on the farm of her owner, John Foster, at Brunswick, Md., and is expected to foal early next year.

The big days next week are: American Legion Day, Tuesday; Cumberland Day, Wednesday; Eagles Day, Thursday, and Johnstown Day, Friday.

Entries will close today for the Clifton W. White Handicap, which will be the fifth race next Wednesday—"Cumberland Day."

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22. — That very funny carrot-top, Red Skelton, finally is getting the break he deserves. His Metro bosses just told me they have handed him the comedy lead in "The Spy," a dual part of a guy who is a spy for both sides in the Civil War. Better still, Red gets really top set up in the technical end.

Linda Darnell

Paul Jones, who produced all the Crosby - Hope comedies at Paramount will try his production skill with Skelton. Harry Tugend, who did "That's Life" for Danny Kaye is adapting the screen play from an original story by Norman Panama and Melvin Frank. They are the boys who wrote "Road to Utopia" and "My Favorite Blonde" for Hope. That's really giving a guy the works.

I didn't blame Red for some of his beefs in the past, but this time he certainly can't complain because the studio is going all out to make this one a smash.

Get set for a new heart throb girls because you're finally going to see that very handsome Englishman, Robert Douglas, in his first American movie.

He gets the prize role of the romantic young father in "Christopher Blake." That's the part so many of our local boys tested for and wanted so badly.

Douglas is tall and blonde and was quite the stage and screen idol in London. Socially he did alright too, since he is the Earl of Warwick's brother-in-law. During the war he made a hero's record as a flier in the air arm of the British Navy. Jack Warner signed him last year when he saw him in England, but his commitments kept him there until now.

After Jack Warner saw Richard Widmark's sensational acting in "Kiss Of Death," he asked Darryl Zanuck for permission to fly Widmark out here from New York to make a test for Bette Davis' next picture, "Winter Meeting." He is under contract to 20th. Naturally, Darryl said yes, for it would be a great thing if Widmark gets the job.

The interesting thing is all through "Kiss Of Death" Widmark, who is really a very good looking boy, wore a wig to give him that low-brow appearance. You'll see him in plenty of 20th pictures for he's the hottest thing I've seen on the screen since Burt Lancaster.

Greer Garson waited until she was sure there could be no reconciliation before she filed suit against Richard Ney. The idea of a second divorce was unpleasant to Greer, but because she knew she could not save her marriage she decided upon the divorce. Greer has been going out to dinner with various male friends and she felt her position was too difficult while she was still Mrs. Ney.

I feel very sorry for Richard who was so in love with her. But it was inevitable from the time that I printed the exclusive story of their separation that there was to be no reconciliation, although Greer and Richard talked things over at Carmel on several occasions.

Chatter in Hollywood: Linda Darnell tells me she hasn't a rag to her back. While she was in Europe she was so sorry for the people who had no clothes and almost no food that she gave away every stitch she took with her, with the exception of what she actually wore.

"I even gave my golf shoes to a woman who took the cleats out of them and who said they were her best shoes," Linda said.

I must say Miss "Forever Amber" conducted herself admirably while she was in Europe, and the foreign newspapers were very complimentary.

A man that all Hollywood can well be proud of is Reverend Gareth Hughes, who gave up an acting career to go into the desert and build a church in a desolate community at Wadsworth. Gareth has had almost no money to carry on his work, but he's looked after the families, many of them Indians.

Last Thursday, Hedy Lamarr and Mark Stevens went to visit him, and it was a fine thing to do because all the little children of the neighborhood came to see them. Hedy and Mark attended the Vesper service which was held in Gareth's church.

What he has done for those children is unbelievable in the way of clothing as well as spiritual help. He does need money, however, to continue his work.

That fine actress, Edith Barrett, finally has been lured out of retirement. Edith, who is Vincent Price's wife, called me to say she has agreed to play the role of Diana Lynn's mother in "Prelude To Night" which Arthur Lyons is making for Producing Artists, Inc.

Edith, you remember, left the screen five years ago to devote herself to her child, and said then that Vincent could take care of the acting in the family. She stuck by those guns, too, despite many flattering offers, but now she feels their boy is old enough to leave for short periods.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Guess who picked up the check for Dolly O'Brien at Ciro's? None other than Johnny Meyer, who is back among us again.

After a hot and heavy quarrel that lasted four days, Tony Martin and Cyd Charisse have kissed and made up. This is a romance to watch.

Fay Bainter's reception at the Westport tryout of "The Skull Beneath" must have been very gratifying. She took ten curtain calls. In the swank first night audience were Noel Coward, Gene Tierney, Mary Martin, Diana Wynyard, the Brock Pembertons and others who motored from New York.

Betty Grable and Harry James are faring much better with their race horses this season. They have had four winners.

Well, here's a surprise. Jack Warner has joined Ann in Rome. I didn't even know he had left the country. He may take a studio there.

Colleen Gray, who has the lead in "Kiss of Death," is saying au revoir to her husband, Rodney Amateau, writer-director for six months. He goes to Europe on an assignment.

The Kathryn Grayson-Johnny Johnston marriage is finally set for tomorrow night in Carmel, at nine o'clock. Maureen O'Hara and Joe Kirkwood left tonight to act as matron or honor and best man.

Writer Steve Fisher and Vivian McCoy a twosome at Charley Foy's.

That's a beautiful emerald cut diamond director Jack Bernard put on the finger of Dorothy Day. They'll marry October 15. She was formerly known as Vicki Lester, the actress, and is now a dress designer.

Ray Bolger has a broken toe, which ain't good for a dancer. He tripped and fell downstairs.

Unless there is some tax settlement, I doubt very much if "Unconquered," set for September 1 in England, will be shown there.

Sylvia Wallace, who was on modern screen for so long, and who has been in Europe with her husband, Irving Wallace, is expecting a baby.

Well Dorothy Manners and John Haskell are honeymooning after being married in my garden. While Dorothy is away for four weeks, Kay Proctor, well known magazine writer, is pinch-hitting for her.

That's all today.

A Roman soldier carried a sponge with him for use as a drinking vessel, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Workers Quit Rather Than Roll Their Own

HOBART, Tasmania—(AP)—Nineteen of 45 British migrants allotted for work on the Butler's Gorge project of the Tasmanian Hydroelectric Commission quit their jobs because, they say, the couldn't get "tailor made" cigarettes.

Two men told reporters they would not adopt the Australian custom of rolling their own. Some of the men who left the project are now hotel waiters.

Tasmanian Immigration Minister E. R. A. Howroyd said "it is obvious some migrants who were booked for work by the commission used it as an excuse to secure a cheap quick passage to Australia."

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—It is always a bit startling, in view of the mountainous salaries paid to star performers in the better gin mills of this town, to discover the rooms in which they dress for the show. If you are raised on movies, as I have been, you expect three-room suites, with hot and cold running red roses all over the place, chaise lounges and at least six ladies and gentlemen, in immaculate evening dress, making sparkling conversation while the heroine dresses demurely behind a 15th century lacquered screen.

Lena Horne

I was in Lena Horne's cubicle at the Copacabana the other night and was able to get my eyes off Lena for enough seconds to look around and observe that the star's dressing room provided by M. Proser, mine host, followed the same general pattern ats most Manhattan locker rooms—that is, it bore no resemblance to those Judy Garland-Irene Dunne affairs.

It is about the size of the bathroom in a Mills hotel and you reach it from the bar by wandering down past the kitchen and the clatter of cutlery.

Instead of suggesting a Ritz Tower living room, it has the quality of a hall bedroom in the West Forties, with rickety chairs, Lena's stray brassieres dangling from coat hangers, the perennial postcards and telegrams from well wishers lining the long mirror by the dressing table and the inevitable snapshots of friends and relatives stuck around the room.

Instead of the white-tie-and-tails of visitors making with Noel Coward dialogue, the entourage at the time of my visit consisted of a press agent, a costume designer, an amiable guy who had some business connection with Lena, and Lena's personal maid.

It was shirtsleeves instead of dinner jackets, and instead of the maid backing out of the room like a Japanese quitting the presence of his emperor, she sat down and blandly thumbed through Lena's mail to see if there was any for her.

The whole thing was considerably less pretentious than the movie-style dressing rooms, and much more comfortable—and that was how I found Lena, unpretentious and a comfortable person with whom to talk.

"I was a gawky one," Lena Horne recalled as she remembered her youth in Brooklyn, "but then, what girl in her teens isn't? I had my share of boy friends, but I came from a very strict and very respectable family, and we never were allowed to go over to Manhattan except with a chaperone. I went to Girls' high school, which was just a little way from Boys' high school, and I lived in a big house with my family just off the Bushwick section of Brooklyn."

Evidently the racehorse grace of Miss H. was noticeable even then, though, for at 16 she was a showgirl in New York and from that time on show business was her life.

Lena Horne adores New York—she just bought a home in St. Albans, out in Queens, and she also maintains a little apartment in Manhattan—and is especially fond of Madison avenue, which must have more little women's shops than any street in the world. Maadison avenue is the hunting grounds for the woman who wants to be dressed in good taste but a little differently, and Lena has been wandering up and down it for years looking for just the right things to wear.

If there is no pomp and elegance about Lena's dressing room, things are much different when she does her turn for the cash customers. Hers, in the final analysis, is a medium-sized talent—a fair voice and good looks—but she makes such a production out of her act that doubting Thomases are swept away.

She is almost the exact opposite of Billie Holiday, the ill-starred queen of 52nd street, who now is serving a term in a southern pen on dope charges. Billie sings simply starkly, with only an infrequent snap of the fingers to gild the rose.

Lena quivers, arches her eyebrows, smiles dazzingly, shuffles around in a little dance, closes her eyes dramatically—she gives it what show people call the business. The result is remarkable.

Like Al Jolson, whose voice never will make Nelson Eddy uneasy, Lena gets her personality across. You applaud madly, and it is only when you get out into 60th street that you pause and ask yourself exactly what

WIFE PRESERVERS

In making sandwiches for a picnic, use a variety of breads. Spread butter or margarine right to the edges of the bread. Cut the sandwiches in different shapes so that you can easily identify them. Wrap each sandwich—or no more than two or three—in waxed paper.

Lena Horne adores New York—she just bought a home in St. Albans, out in Queens, and she also maintains a little apartment in Manhattan—and is especially fond of Madison avenue, which must have more little women's shops than any street in the world. Maadison avenue is the hunting grounds for the woman who wants to be dressed in good taste but a little differently, and Lena has been wandering up and down it for years looking for just the right things to wear.

If there is no pomp and elegance about Lena's dressing room, things are much different when she does her turn for the cash customers. Hers, in the final analysis, is a medium-sized talent—a fair voice and good looks—but she makes such a production out of her act that doubting Thomases are swept away.

She is almost the exact opposite of Billie Holiday, the ill-starred queen of 52nd street, who now is serving a term in a southern pen on dope charges. Billie sings simply starkly, with only an infrequent snap of the fingers to gild the rose.

Lena quivers, arches her eyebrows, smiles dazzingly, shuffles around in a little dance, closes her eyes dramatically—she gives it what show people call the business. The result is remarkable.

Like Al Jolson, whose voice never will make Nelson Eddy uneasy, Lena gets her personality across. You applaud madly, and it is only when you get out into 60th street that you pause and ask yourself exactly what

WIFE PRESERVERS

In making sandwiches for a picnic, use a variety of breads. Spread butter or margarine right to the edges of the bread. Cut the sandwiches in different shapes so that you can easily identify them. Wrap each sandwich—or no more than two or three—in waxed paper.

Walking on a Wall

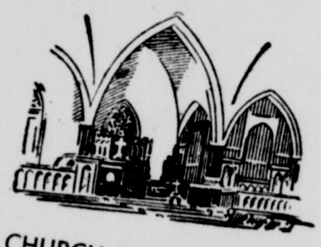
His real problem is to keep the weight of his body evenly distributed so that the line of gravity passes through his feet. It is the first lesson a child or young animal must learn in assuming an upright position.

Children derive much pleasure and satisfaction from their ability to walk a wall or narrow curb or rail fence. It gives them a sense of accomplishment when they are able to perform these feats without falling.

Balance is important not only in physical posture and movement, but in all the relations of life. It is especially important for children, as well as older people, to learn to keep their balance, mentally, morally and spiritually.

The life without religion is an unbalanced life. Man needs religion and the consciousness of God to keep him from falling under the weight of temporal cares.

The Church provides religious instruction and spiritual inspiration for all who seek its ministrations.



THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . .
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend and support the church of his choice. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to Church on Sunday and read your Bible daily

Walking on a Wall

His real problem is to keep the weight of his body evenly distributed so that the line of gravity passes through his feet. It is the first lesson a child or young animal must learn in assuming an upright position.

Children derive much pleasure and satisfaction from their ability to walk a wall or narrow curb or rail fence. It gives them a sense of accomplishment when they are able to perform these feats without falling.

Balance is important not only in physical posture and movement, but in all the relations of life. It is especially important for children, as well as older people, to learn to keep their balance, mentally, morally and spiritually.

The life without religion is an unbalanced life. Man needs religion and the consciousness of God to keep him from falling under the weight of temporal cares.

The Church provides religious instruction and spiritual inspiration for all who seek its ministrations.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . .
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend and support the church of his choice. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to Church on Sunday and read your Bible daily

By KATHERINE FISHER

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Aug. 21—At a meeting of the Moorefield Lions Club recently, members were informed that the survey of a new water system for the town will be started in the next two weeks.

Dr. M. H. Maxwell, chairman of the Health and Welfare Committee, stated that the club had offered its assistance to the town council in the program and reported that H. K. Gridley, engineer with the West Virginia Health Department in the department of sanitary engineering, would make the survey of the new water supply.

W. H. Kemp, chairman of the program committee, announced that the joint picnic to be held by the club and the Wardensville Lions Club will be held in September.

Meetings in September will be on the second and fourth Mondays, it was announced.

Levies Approved

D. W. Heishman took office this week as a member of the Hardy County Court. He was appointed two weeks ago by the court to fill the unexpired term of C. C. Heishman who died recently. At a meeting of the court this week, the tax levy from the state tax department was approved.

The levy estimates of the four levying bodies of Hardy County were also approved this week by the State Tax Commission. Levies approved were the Hardy County Board of Education, the Hardy County Court and the municipalities of Moorefield and Wardensville.

Defer Buying of Textbooks

Parents of Hardy County school children are asked to defer purchasing school books this year until given the proper list by the teachers, according to an announcement by R. S. Dispanet, superintendent of county schools.

Dispanet pointed out that many of the textbooks in the elementary schools have been changed this year due to adoptions by the State Board of Education.

As announced last year the local board of education was able to furnish most of the textbooks until the changes were made. The allotment from the state aid for free textbooks for one year is inadequate to supply the demand for new texts. Several years time will be required to accumulate enough books to furnish all pupils.

The local board will furnish as many new books as possible this year and parents will be required to supply the remainder.

School Board Moved

Superintendent Dispanet also announced that the work of moving the school board's offices to the new building on the high school grounds was completed this week.

The new quarters are larger than the old offices in M. A. Bean building. The new offices will enable the school board to consolidate all activities of the administrative set-up in one building. The free text books, the library, school furniture, new equipment and supplies for the school board will be located here.

The offices of the Hot Lunch Program and the offices of the Veteran's Administration On-The-Farm Training program will also be located in the new quarters.

Resuscitator Demonstrated

Members of the Moorefield Volunteer Fire Company demonstrated the new resuscitator-inhalator and the Scott AirPak at the Firemen's Hall last night.

Those present were told that the resuscitator carried a two hour supply of oxygen which would be sufficient to transport a patient to the nearest hospital. The medicinal oxygen used with the equipment is supplied from Elkins.

Local physicians were interested because the apparatus could be used in the event of infantile paralysis in this section. The resuscitator could be used long enough to transport a polio case to an 'iron-lung.'

Ground Will Be Donated For Site Of Guard Armory

By GEORGE H. HANST

OAKLAND, Aug. 22—Following a meeting at the City Hall relative to the organization of a Garrett County unit of the National Guard, Stuart F. Hamill, Jr., appeared before the County Commissioners and the Board of Education this week, making several requests and informing these officials of plans and requirements pertinent to the local situation.

Mr. Hamill pointed out three requirements made by the State and National organizations which must be met before application is made for the establishment of a unit here. Theyq include the donation of temporary quarters, the donation of a suitable piece of ground 100 by 200 feet upon which a permanent armory can be erected, and the arrangemqent for a public meeting to select the branch of service desired for the county.

The County Commissioners assured Mr. Hamill that the citizens' meeting could be held in the Court Room at the Court House upon any date requested by him and the members of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion. The meeting will be held Monday night, August 25, at which time a donation of 100 by 200 feet of ground will be made by the post for the erection of the permanent armory in case the Board of Education will not set aside the required amount of ground on the hill, Mr. Hamill said. He also stated that he had been advised by Legion officials that a necessary amount of ground is available on the property now owned by the Legion facing the old Deer Park Road and running along Fourth Street in Oakland.

Another meeting of interested groups in the county and their representatives has been called for 7 p. m. EST, Tuesday, at the City Hall when arrangements will be completed preparatory to the citizen's meeting at the Court House.

Water System Survey Planned For Moorefield

By KATHERINE FISHER

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Aug. 21—At a meeting of the Moorefield Lions Club recently, members were informed that the survey of a new water system for the town will be started in the next two weeks.

Dr. M. H. Maxwell, chairman of the Health and Welfare Committee, stated that the club had offered its assistance to the town council in the program and reported that H. K. Gridley, engineer with the West Virginia Health Department in the department of sanitary engineering, would make the survey of the new water supply.

W. H. Kemp, chairman of the program committee, announced that the joint picnic to be held by the club and the Wardensville Lions Club will be held in September.

Meetings in September will be on the second and fourth Mondays, it was announced.

Levies Approved

D. W. Heishman took office this week as a member of the Hardy County Court. He was appointed two weeks ago by the court to fill the unexpired term of C. C. Heishman who died recently. At a meeting of the court this week, the tax levy from the state tax department was approved.

The levy estimates of the four levying bodies of Hardy County were also approved this week by the State Tax Commission. Levies approved were the Hardy County Board of Education, the Hardy County Court and the municipalities of Moorefield and Wardensville.

Defer Buying of Textbooks

Parents of Hardy County school children are asked to defer purchasing school books this year until given the proper list by the teachers, according to an announcement by R. S. Dispanet, superintendent of county schools.

Dispanet pointed out that many of the textbooks in the elementary schools have been changed this year due to adoptions by the State Board of Education.

As announced last year the local board of education was able to furnish most of the textbooks until the changes were made. The allotment from the state aid for free textbooks for one year is inadequate to supply the demand for new texts. Several years time will be required to accumulate enough books to furnish all pupils.

The local board will furnish as many new books as possible this year and parents will be required to supply the remainder.

School Board Moved

Superintendent Dispanet also announced that the work of moving the school board's offices to the new building on the high school grounds was completed this week.

The new quarters are larger than the old offices in M. A. Bean building. The new offices will enable the school board to consolidate all activities of the administrative set-up in one building. The free text books, the library, school furniture, new equipment and supplies for the school board will be located here.

The offices of the Hot Lunch Program and the offices of the Veteran's Administration On-The-Farm Training program will also be located in the new quarters.

Resuscitator Demonstrated

Members of the Moorefield Volunteer Fire Company demonstrated the new resuscitator-inhalator and the Scott AirPak at the Firemen's Hall last night.

Those present were told that the resuscitator carried a two hour supply of oxygen which would be sufficient to transport a patient to the nearest hospital. The medicinal oxygen used with the equipment is supplied from Elkins.

Local physicians were interested because the apparatus could be used in the event of infantile paralysis in this section. The resuscitator could be used long enough to transport a polio case to an 'iron-lung.'

Kicked By Bull

Ervin Troutman, 56, Wellersburg, Pa., was treated in Allegany Hospital yestereday morning for a right leg injury. He said he was kicked by a bull on Thursday.

Ground Will Be Donated For Site Of Guard Armory

By GEORGE H. HANST

OAKLAND, Aug. 22—Following a meeting at the City Hall relative to the organization of a Garrett County unit of the National Guard, Stuart F. Hamill, Jr., appeared before the County Commissioners and the Board of Education this week, making several requests and informing these officials of plans and requirements pertinent to the local situation.

Mr. Hamill pointed out three requirements made by the State and National organizations which must be met before application is made for the establishment of a unit here. Theyq include the donation of temporary quarters, the donation of a suitable piece of ground 100 by 200 feet upon which a permanent armory can be erected, and the arrangemqent for a public meeting to select the branch of service desired for the county.

Since the meeting Mr. Hamill says he has practically been assured of the "work shop" building one night a week in connection with the High School plant, near Winter's Dairy on Eighth Street for temporary quarters, and that it is possible for donation of the required amount for the permanent building in the vicinity of the work shop which belongs to the Board of Education of Garrett County.

The County Commissioners assured Mr. Hamill that the citizens' meeting could be held in the Court Room at the Court House upon any date requested by him and the members of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion. The meeting will be held Monday night, August 25, at which time a donation of 100 by 200 feet of ground will be made by the post for the erection of the permanent armory in case the Board of Education will not set aside the required amount of ground on the hill, Mr. Hamill said. He also stated that he had been advised by Legion officials that a necessary amount of ground is available on the property now owned by the Legion facing the old Deer Park Road and running along Fourth Street in Oakland.

Another meeting of interested groups in the county and their representatives has been called for 7 p. m. EST, Tuesday, at the City Hall when arrangements will be completed preparatory to the citizen's meeting at the Court House.

Juries Drawn

Grand and petit jurors for the September term of the Garrett County Circuit Court were drawn this week by Chief Judge William A. Huster, in the presence of court officials and local attorneys.

Lester C. Yutzy, Crellin, was named foreman of the grand jury which is scheduled to convene Monday morning, September 8.

Parish House Damaged By Fire

The Oakland Volunter Fire Company was called yesterday morning to extinguish a smouldering fire which did considerable damage to the Episcopal parish house on Center Street. The stairs to the basement were burned away, the electrical switchbox was destroyed, and sections of the basement wall damaged. Lightning apparently was the origin, causing the switchbox to burst into flames which in turn lighted the staircase above it. The fire was not discovered until 9 o'clock.

Negro Injured In Wreck

Benjamin Cooper, colored, Detroit, Mich., is a patient at Potomac Valley Hospital suffering from injuries about the head received at 8:45 this morning when his automobile collided with a large cab-over-engine truck, driven by James Marion, Charleston, W. Va., about one mile down Alleghany Front, near the watering trough.

Cooper was traveling with his wife and two daughters, Jo Ann and Mildred, going west on his way to Detroit. The truck was traveling toward Keyser, loaded with empty beer cases. As the automobile came around a curve, it collided with the truck. Both the Cooper girls were admitted to Potomac Valley Hospital and were treated for minor injuries. Mrs. Cooper and the driver of the truck were uninjured.

Damages to the truck were estimated at $1,000, while the automobile was damaged to an extent of between $200 and $300.

The accident is being investigated by Sheriff James A. Dixon and State Trooper R. R. Karickhoff.

House Completely Destroyed

A three-room house on Potomac Heights was completely destroyed by fire this morning at 9:30. The house was owned by Charles Armentrout, Limestone Road and occupied by the family of Robert Gray.

The fire, caused by an overheated kitchen stove, was discovered by Annie Edmonds, Gray's housekeeper, who told Fire Chief Horace Clarke she had put the dinner on the stove and then went back to bed. She was awakened by the crackling of the flames. None of the contents of the house were saved.

Firemen were handicapped by the lack of water and had to use a volunteer bucket brigade.

Many Market Leaders Continue To Falter; Dealings Remain Slow

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(AP)—A little short covering and investment nibbling buoyed individual stocks today although many market leaders continued to falter and dealings remained among the slowest of the past two years.

The ticker tape dozed throughout most of the proceedings. There were a few wide jumps by "thin" issues on small trades but fractional variations predominated at the close with plus signs a trifle in the majority. Transfers of 580,000 shares equalled those of Thursday and were another low since June 9.

Highs for the year were touched by Hershey Chocolate which finished up 9½ points at 115 on only 400 shares; Western Union three-fourths at 25⅛, Detroit Steel five-eighths at 23¼, and Pittston Company one-half at 29½. McIntyre Porcupine added 2½ at 55½ and du Pont two at 190¼.

Gains of a point or more were shown for Pacific Western Oil at 38, Southeastern Greyhound 22½, Texas Pacific Land Trust 28, C.I.T. Financial 46¼, Cudahy 52, Miami Copper 17, American Smelting 62 and International Harvester 87½.

Lesser improvement was retained by United States Steel, General Motors, American Telephone, Curtiss Wright "A," Sperry, North American, Electric Power and Light, Kennecott, Westinghouse, United States Gypsum, Owens-Illinois, Great Northern Railway, Standard Oil of Indiana, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Johns-Manville.

Joy Manufacturing dropped 1½ following a proposal to increase capital stock. Moderate recessions were suffered by Bethlehem, Republic Steel, Chrysler, Goodrich, United States Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Deere, International Nickel, General Electric, Allied Chemical, J. C. Penney, Santa Fe, New York Central, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Pacific and Baltimore and Ohio.

Ahead in the Curb were Reliance Electric (on a pleasing dividend), Solar Aircraft, Fansteel, Colonial Mills and Textron. Breeze Corporation eased following a cut quarterly. In arrears were Cuban Atlantic Sugar, Namm's and Le Tourneau. Turnover here was 130,000 shares versus 120,000 yesterday.

United States government obligations were quiet with the Victory 2½s of December 1967-72 quoted over-the-counter unchanged at 102 30-32 bid.

Al Araf, in Mohammedanism is a borderline between hell and heaven, equivalent to the Christian limbo. It is the abode of souls whose earthly life, through infancy, ignorance or congenital incompetence, merited neither blame nor praise. They suffer no punishment but enjoy no rewards such as form the bliss of Paradise.

Youths Try To Break Into Junction Store

Two Altoona, Pa., boys will be given a hearing this morning in the juvenile court of Hampshire County on charges of attempted breaking and entering, Trooper F. H. Tribett, Romney, said last night.

The boys, he said, admitted trying to break into the Charles High General Store at Junction, W. Va., at the intersection of Routes 50 and 220, seven miles west of Romney.

Trooper Tribett and Trooper E. D. Harbert were summoned to the store yesterday at 1:30 a. m. and found the glass broken in the double windows of the store. The lads, they added, tried to unlock the place by whittling around the lock with a penknife, but apparently gave up and broke the double windows in the front of the store, leaving a good supply of fingerprints on the glass.

The troopers apprehended the two youths, one 12 and the other 17, on Route 50 near Burlington and said the youths admitted, after fingerprinting, that they tried to enter the store to get something to eat. The juveniles told officers they left Altoona to go to Pensacola, Fla., for a job.

Many Market Leaders Continue To Falter; Dealings Remain Slow

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(AP)—A little short covering and investment nibbling buoyed individual stocks today although many market leaders continued to falter and dealings remained among the slowest of the past two years.

The ticker tape dozed throughout most of the proceedings. There were a few wide jumps by "thin" issues on small trades but fractional variations predominated at the close with plus signs a trifle in the majority. Transfers of 580,000 shares equalled those of Thursday and were another low since June 9.

Highs for the year were touched by Hershey Chocolate which finished up 9½ points at 115 on only 400 shares; Western Union three-fourths at 25¼, Detroit Steel five-eighths at 23¼, and Pittston Company one-half at 29½. McIntyre Porcupine added 2½ at 55½ and du Pont two at 190¼.

Gains of a point or more were shown for Pacific Western Oil at 38, Southeastern Greyhound 22½, Texas Pacific Land Trust 28, C.I.T. Financial 46¼, Cudahy 52, Miami Copper 17, American Smelting 62 and International Harvester 87½.

Lesser improvement was retained by United States Steel, General Motors, American Telephone, Curtiss Wright "A," Sperry, North American, Electric Power and Light, Kennecott, Westinghouse, United States Gypsum, Owens-Illinois, Great Northern Railway, Standard Oil of Indiana, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Johns-Manville.

Joy Manufacturing dropped 1½ following a proposal to increase capital stock. Moderate recessions were suffered by Bethlehem, Republic Steel, Chrysler, Goodrich, United States Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Deere, International Nickel, General Electric, Allied Chemical, J. C. Penney, Santa Fe, New York Central, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Pacific and Baltimore and Ohio.

Ahead in the Curb were Reliance Electric (on a pleasing dividend), Solar Aircraft, Fansteel, Colonial Mills and Textron. Breeze Corporation eased following a cut quarterly. In arrears were Cuban Atlantic Sugar, Namm's and Le Tourneau. Turnover here was 130,000 shares versus 120,000 yesterday.

United States government obligations were quiet with the Victory 2½s of December 1967-72 quoted over-the-counter unchanged at 102 30-32 bid.

Youths Try To Break Into Junction Store

Two Altoona, Pa., boys will be given a hearing this morning in the juvenile court of Hampshire County on charges of attempted breaking and entering, Trooper F. H. Tribett, Romney, said last night.

The boys, he said, admitted trying to break into the Charles High General Store at Junction, W. Va., at the intersection of Routes 50 and 220, seven miles west of Romney.

Trooper Tribett and Trooper E. D. Harbert were summoned to the store yesterday at 1:30 a. m. and found the glass broken in the double windows of the store. The lads, they added, tried to unlock the place by whittling around the lock with a penknife, but apparently gave up and broke the double windows in the front of the store, leaving a good supply of fingerprints on the glass.

The troopers apprehended the two youths, one 12 and the other 17, on Route 50 near Burlington and said the youths admitted, after fingerprinting, that they tried to enter the store to get something to eat. The juveniles told officers they left Altoona to go to Pensacola, Fla., for a job.

Cloudburst Hits Cumberland And Frostburg Areas

City's Business Area Flooded By Heavy Rain

County Roads Are Badly Washed; Rock Fall Is Reported At Quarry On Mt. Savage Road

A cloudburst striking at 1:40 p. m. flooded much of Cumberland's business section yesterday afternoon, badly washed some county roads and caused a fall of 3,000 tons of rock at the Corriganville quarry of the Cumberland Cement and Supply Company in which three men barely escaped with their lives.

Water flowed virtually from building to building on North Liberty Street and part of Pershing and Baltimore streets within minutes after the torrential downpour began.

Merchants in the business section affected said that from two to three feet of water poured into the basements of their stores, but none reported any damage.

At the Western Union office on Liberty Street, three to four inches of water covered the floor and about an inch covered the rear of Rand's drug store, flowing in a North Centre Street doorway. Water lapped at the Baltimore Street entrance of the same store.

Sewers Are Inadequate

The Liberty Theater reported two to three feet of water in the basement but the Fort Cumberland Hotel said outside gratings were plugged just in time to prevent the water from spilling into the basement of the hostelry.

At the bend on Pershinp Street just beyond the post office water reached from building to building and spilled into basements.

While traffic was never stopped on Baltimore Street, it moved slowly until the water receded in a comparatively short time.

Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, said the flood-like condition was caused by too much water for the city's storm sewers. He recalled a similar condition some 10 years ago.

Manhole covers were loosened in several sections of the downtown area from water pressure in overflowing sewers, and a street department crew begon clearing muck from streets in the business section as soon as the heavy downpour stopped.

The crew will continue working today until the main business streets are cleared and other city streets will be cleaned Monday. Corrigan said it may take several days to complete the job since it will be necessary to clean the muck and then flush the streets.

The Green Street subway was blocked completely for about half an hour and a taxicab, pickup truck and several other cars were stalled at times in the almost hip-deep water.

Roads Hard Hit

Albert S. Paye, county engineer, said county road crews are faced today with a "big job" of repairing county roads damaged to some extent by earlier hard rains and badly rutted in yesterday's storm.

While he had not been to the scene last night, Paye said roads east of Cumberland are "bound to have suffered heavily."

After his return from a survey trip through the Frostburg, Eckhart and Shaft sections, Paye reported the worst situation at Shaft and said he was informed water flowed two feet over the bridge there at the peak.

Road crews were put to hand work on some of the worst places after the storm and mechanical equipment will be moved in today to begin the repair job. Meanwhile, dangerous spots were marked with red lanterns as a warning to motorists.

George B. Hale, resident maintenance engineer of the State Roads Commission, reported the "biggest mess" for his crews to clean up was between Narrows Park and Corriganville although he said Georges Creek Boulevard was flooded and water covered Route 40 at Eckhart.

There was no serious damage to state roads, Hale said, and all were in "good shape" by 7:30 p. m. Conditions were so good, he added, that it was not necessary to post any warning lanterns.

At Corriganville three feet of dirt and stone washed on to the road near the bank side and tapered off to a lesser depth near the opposite edge of the road, Hale reported.

However, one-way traffic was possible for the short period before the debric was cleared away.

A lot of earth and rock washed off the mountainside at Eckhart, and rubbish washed out of backyards contributed to the general cleaning up job necessary, Hale said.

The Western Maryland Railway and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroads reported no damage here, but the B. and O. said a washout at Rockwood, Pa., tied up trains for 35 to 40 minutes.

Telephone Cables Affected

The Potomac Edison Company termed itself fortunate with "not a bit of trouble," but the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company reported water got into cables affecting 76 lines ond 176 telephones.

One of the cables was on Washington Street and another in LaVale while a third was a toll cable between Cumberland and Frostburg which put four to five lines to Piedmont, W. Va., out of order.

The official weather observer reported only .72 of an inch of rain fell at the measuring station in Constitution Park, but observers of the storm downtown said the fall in the business section and some other parts of the city probably was closer to the two inches that fell at Frostburg.

Yesterday's maximum temperature was reported at 85 degrees and the forecast for today calls for continued humidity,, not much change in temperature and more thundersowers.

Three Stone Quarry Workers Have Narrow Escape As Rain Loosens 3,000 Tons of Rock

Three thousand tons of rock loosened by a torrential rain rolled down the side of Wills Mountain, and tore through the quarry of the Cumberland Cement and Supply Company yesterday afternoon causing damage that may amount to $3,000.

Three employes at the quarry, located about half way up the mountainside, narrowly escaped with their lives when the bulk of the rock missed the buildings in which they were working.

David C. Martin, 330 North Mechanic Street, manager of the quarry operation, said Lester Christner, about 24, Meyersdale, Pa., and Robert Whitehair, about 25, Homewood Addition, fled from the grinding room where they were working and ran through the path of the avalanche, miraculously escaping unhurt although they were covered with mud.

Runs To Safety

John Seeders, about 21, Corriganville, was working in the secondary crusher house when an empty oil barrel slammed through an open door and landed beside him.

Mud poured into the entrance but the plummeting rocks plunged past the side of the building, Martin said. Meanwhile, Seeders ran across the path of the rock slide to safety and he escaped without injury.

Martin was working in the shop about 50 feet away and had just noticed about 18 inches of water covering the road during the downpour when he heard a noise "like the whole mountain let loose," he related last night.

He said he endeavored to attract the employes' attention but the first "spurt" of rock hit before he succeeded.

Martin said the rumble of the rock fall was like nothing he had ever heard before.

He said the avalanche started at the top of the mountain, apparently as a result of water backing up in rock fissures, fell the 500 feet to the quarry site and continued to a Western Maryland Railway sand siding another 300 feet below.

The Western Maryland said the siding will be out of service until sometime today when clearing operations will get underway.

Coming in three "spurts," the avalanche lasted close to 20 minutes, Martin related.

He said the rock, some of it huge boulders, seemed to roll first and then torrents of water gushed over it.

Mud Covers Equipment

Mud and rock piled up to a depth of four and a half to six feet in front of the secondary crusher house and a small building housing a costly horsepower motor was knocked askew on its foundation. The foundation itself was knocked apart.

The motor, two stone grinders and washers were covered with mud, but the dirt was removed from the machinery after the avalanche ended.

Eight-by-eight pieces of timber were knocked 25 feet by the lesser part of the rock fall.

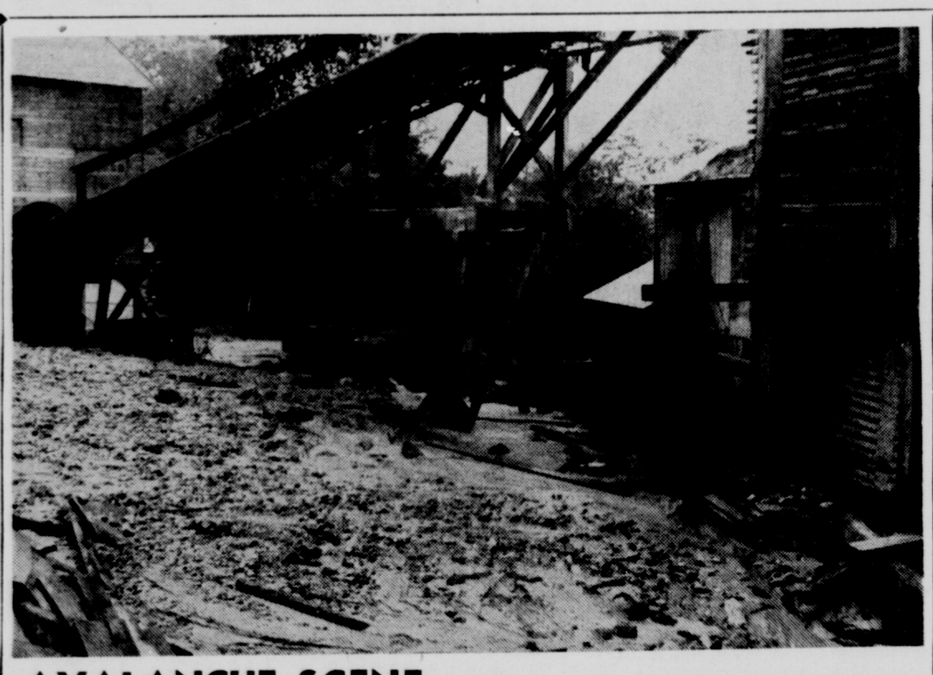
As the avalanche passed the quarry site, it split into two courses, cutting deep ravines into the mountainside and piling rock all along both courses to the railway siding.

Martin said the job of clearing up the mud and rock will begin today. He said the damage was not covered by insurance.



AVALANCHE SCENE—Some of the mud and rock that damaged the Corriganville quarry of the Cumberland Cement and Supply Company on Wills Mountain yesterday afternoon is pictured above. Four and a half to six feet of mud and rock fills the area between two crusher houses. John Seeders, about 21, Corriganville, an employe was working in the crusher house at the right when the fall of 3,000 tons of rock began, and he ran across the path of the fall to safety. Two other employes were working in a building in the rear of this crusher house and ran up a ravine cut by the rocks while the avalanche was still going on. They were unhurt. The bulk of the avalanche passed just beside and to the left of the building where Seeders was working. Water backed up in rock fissures was blamed for the rock fall.

Explosion Victim Lighted Cigaret, She Tells Police

Woman's Condition Is Still Serious

Police said yesterday that Mrs. Chester Erickson, 33, 138 Elder Street, injured in an explosion Thursday night told them she attempted to light a cigaret while lying on the kitchen floor "and doesn't remember anything after that."

Detective Thomas J. See said he questioned the woman, who Memorial Hospital attaches said still is in a "serious condition" briefly yesterday and will continue the investigation when she has recovered sufficiently to answer questions.

Police said that Erickson, who attended the races at Fairgo with his wife, was found sleeping in a car on Offutt Street after the explosion and had not gone to work as was first reported.

Two boys found Erickson, and told him of the blast which occurred in the kitchen and resulted in flash flames blistering woodwork and consuming curtains and blinds in the room, according to the detective.

Police said they also questioned Erickson shortly after he returned to the house, but he was too bewildered to talk.

Mrs. Erickson suffered first, second and third degree burns according to the hospital, and Clarence Thompson, 206 Elder Street, said that he turned off four jets on the gas stove after he and another neighbor broke down the door and entered the kitchen.

Steven Lawrence, 204 Elder Street, told authorities that when he arrived at the top of the outside stair case, leading to the four room apartment, he observed Mrs. Erickson crawling to the porch from a bedroom window. He said he assisted her and then sat her in an upright position on the porch.

Police said it appeared that the door leading from the kitchen to the bedroom must have been closed at the time of the explosion because wallpaper and other fixtures in the remaining three rooms were not damaged.

Mrs. Erickson told police, they said, that she does not remember "anything" after she struck the match to light her cigaret.

The Garrett County schedule calls for a clinic to be held September 10 at the Health Department office in Oakland.

Allegany-Garrett Volunteer Fire Association Plans Picnic Tomorrow

Several state officers are scheduled to give talks at the third annual picnic of the Allegany-Garrett County Volunteer Firemen's Association, which will be held all day tomorrow at Smouse's Beach.

Approximately 600 firemen are expected to attend, including guests from fire companies in Keyser, Ridgeley and Fort Ashby, W. Va., and Meyersdale, Hyndman and Bedford, Pa.

The official opening of the picnic has been scheduled for 10 a. m. with William A. Wilson as master of ceremonies. A ball game between Midland and Lonaconing Fire Company teams will begin at 10:30 a. m. and will be followed by a game between the Chestertown and Barton companies at 11:30 a. m.

William Chappell, president of the Allegany-Garrett association, will present the address of welcome at 1 p. m. State officials who are scheduled to speak are Charles R. Stallings, Jr., Pikesville, president; W. Bartgis Storm, Frederick, immediate past president, Phil Ryan, Mt. Rainier; Bradley C. Riggs and Eugene J. C. Raney, Kensington; Henry Marschalk, Takoma Park; Chief J. W. Just, College Park, and C. C. Larrimore, Easton.

Volunteer fire companies from Cresaptown, Frostburg, Mt. Savage, McCoole and Baltimore Pike will give competitive demonstrations on laying hose and use of special equipment.

Demonstrations of first aid and life saving will be given by teams of the Celanese Corporation of America, Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, Consolidated Fuel Company, Potomac Edison Company, West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company and the Davis Coal and Coke Company.

Judges for the contest will be appointed by the picnic committee, composed of Joseph Wenrich, Harry C. Walters, Nelson W. Russler, Harry Wilson and I. W. Engle.

The committee announced that recreation will include swimming, horseshoe pitching, foot races and a tug of war. A picnic luncheon will be furnished.

County Welfare Fund To Be Cut

J. Milton Patterson, director of the State Department of Public Welfare, advised the Allegany County Board of Commissioners yesterday that the county appropriation for state-aided cases has been reduced two per cent of $500 from the original grant of $25,000.

Patterson said the funds were reduced under a directive from the General Assembly which lopped $500,000 off state welfare appropriations at the last session of the legislature. He advised the commissioners the county will receive its grant on the original basis for the July-Setember quarter with the two per cent slash effective on subsequent dates.

Four additional bids for veterans' lots on Holland Avenue were received yesterday, but the Commissioners asserted some veterans may be disappointed because of failure to follow instructions in placing the bids.

In bidding for the lots, they said, the application must be accompanied by 10 per cent of the proposed purchase price. Some bids received to date did not follow these instructions.

Joseph F. Screen, Jr., 116 Arch Street, placed a bid of $420 for Lot. No. 11; Joseph W. Hogan, 324 Beall Street, seeks any lot but made no bid; Earl E. Davis, 820 Maplewood Lane, seeks Lot No. 30, and John S. Cook, this city, any one of Lots Nos. 3 to 9.

Bids will be acted upon at the meeting of the Commissioners next Friday, August 29.

Several persons appeared before the commissioners in regard to improvement to county roads.

The Allegany Liquor Control Board acknowledged a letter from the commissioners in which the latter group gave the opinion the board should pay its own operating expenses. It also advised the commissioners it would pay for chairs purchased for the board office.

Local Worker Is Injured In Fall

William Weisenmiller, 50, 640 North Centre Street, a Cumberland Brewing Company worker, was treated in Memorial Hospital yesterday for a left wrist injury. X-rays were taken to determine the extent of the injury suffered, he said, when he fell from a ladder.

Miss Helen Little, 17, 516 Ford Avenue, was treated in Allegany yesterday for a severe cut on a finger of her left hand. She said she was cut by a ring on her finger when she fell.

Also treated in Allegany yesterday were Leroy Kifer, 28, Hancock, for a laceration on the head after a concrete block fell on him, and Billy Duckworth, 3, Corriganville, for a laceration on the right foot suffered while swimming.

Treated in Memorial yesterday were Charles Bujac, 51, 232 Cecelia Street, a B. and O. worker, for a turned ankle suffered when he stepped off a car Thursday, and Arthur Deskin, 15, Springfield, W. Va., for a fractured right arm after he fell from a building while playing.

William Stump, 53, Springfield, W. Va., who was admitted to Memorial July 31 for treatment of head injuries West Virginia State Police said were suffered in a fight at Milleson's Mill, near Springfield, was reported fairly good last night. State police said they were informed the man suffered a blood clot on the brain.

William Muir, Jr., 5-year-old son of William Muir, 317 Pennsylvania Avenue, was treated in Memorial Hospital for lacerations of the face, suffered when he fell on concrete while playing.

Bond Action Puzzles County Commissioners

A letter requesting clarification was sent to the Chief deputy comptroller yesterday by the Allegany County Commissioners after the state returned bonds for the county's trial magistrates with the explanation that $5,000 was too much.

The commissioners were puzzled because the law specifically states that amount for magistrates and $1,000 for justices of the peace.

Driver Forfeits Bond

Apprehended for exceeding 30 miles per hour on Route 40 on August 8, Leonard H. Dibert, Route 2, this city, forfeited $6.45 bond in Trial Magistrates' Court yesterday. State Trooper Robert Henline arrested the man.

Members of Luke Local 676, United Paperworkers of America, CIO, will meet this afternoon at 1:30 and 4:30 p. m. in the Piedmont Opera House for action on a new contract with the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company.

Union negotiators for locals at the Luke, Williamsburg, Pa., and Covington, Va., plants announced in a joint statement yesterday that they will recommend ratification of the proposed contract agrement.

The company and union, at a meeting in Washington, D. C., late Thursday night signed an agreement covering all issues except wages. Membership action will be taken at:

Williamsburg, Sunday, at 12:45 and 7:30 p. m., at Eagles Hall.

Covington, Monday, at 7:30 p. m. at court house.

The joint union-company statement reads:

"With the exception of the wage clause the new agreement became effective when it was signed by union and company representatives in the Ambassador Hotel, Washington, at 11 o'clock Thursday night.

"The term of the agreement is for one year, and may be continued from year to year thereafter unless terminated by either party."

During the negotiations a company spokesman announced that the management had approved the principle of a company-wide contributory pension plan for hourly paid employes, and that a detailed proposal would be placed before the board of directors and the stockholders of the company.

If the directors and stockholders approve the management hopes to offer a pension plan to employes within one year.

The spokesman said he hoped that provisions of the plan would approximate those of the plan now in effect for salaried employes.

Since 1944 the management has studied a pension plan for hourly employes, the spokesman said. Up to date actuarial studies have been authorized and now are underway.

The pension plan has been a request of the union for the past three years.

Both parties agreed to withhold detailed terms until after ratification by union members, and it is planned to issue a joint statement Tuesday to cover this point.

SIX NEGROES ARRESTED AFTER "FREE-FOR-ALL"

Four negroes were jailed, and two others paid fines yesterday as a result of what police described as a "free-for-all over a stolen watch" in which 25 men participated at 12:30 a. m. in an alley adjacent to Hammersmith's Restaurant, Queen City Pavement.

Investigating officers said the six were arrested after the 25 negroes created a general disturbance in the alley, and added witnesses told of flying brickbats before police arrived.

The four men who were jailed in default of $10 fines were booked as Clarence Jackson, Donald Briscoe and James Lee, all of Hagerstown and Ernest Tate, Charleston, W. Va.

Police said they were called to the scene of the fight shortly after midnight but said many of the negroes participating in the fight fled when they were informed that authorities had been called. Most of the persons engaging in the fight were out-of-town residents here for the races, according to police, who said they were told the fight started when an unidentified man declared his watch was taken.

A man booked as E. Roach, Mapleside, was fined $5 on a drunk and disorderly conduct charge. "He went on a rampage and broke a number of dishes at a local home," officers said they were told.

Benefit Dance Held

Over 100 couples attended a semi-formal dance last night at the Cumberland Country Club, sponsored by the community service group of the Women's Civic Club for the benefit of the club's scholarship fund. Music was provided by Jimmy Andrews' orchestra.

Local Boy, 7, Third Area Polio Victim, Succumbs

James Morris, Jr., Dies In Ambulance

The third county child to be stricken with infantile paralysis within the past month died yesterday at 5:20 p. m. en route to Sydenham Hospital, Baltimore in a State Police ambulance.

He was James Alan Morris, Jr., 7, only child of James A. and Jean McGee Morris, 565 Patterson Avenue.

Dr. Winter R. Frantz, city and county health offictr, said that the child was stricken with bulbar type of infantile paralysis which affects the respiratory system. The health officer added that the three polio cases do not represent any particular increase over last year, when several such cases were reported.

The boy, who had been ill since Tuesday, was admitted to Memorial Hospital Thursday. The Health Department made arrangements for Trooper Robert Henline and Miss Margaret Neumann, public health nurse, to take the boy, accompanied by his father, to the Baltimore hospital by ambulance yesterday afternoon.

Trooper Henline said the boy died as the ambulance was nearing Hagerstown.

Born in Cumberland, the child would have entered the second grade at West Side School this fall. Besides his parents, he is survived by his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Emily McGee, of the Patterson Avenue address.

The body will remain at the Hafer Funeral Home.

The two other county polio victims, both of whom are reported in satisfactory condition at Baltimore hospitals, are Allen Pryor, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob A. Pryor, 107 Mary Street; and Paul David Crawford, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Crawford, Laurel Run, near Moscow.

CITY TO RECEIVE $26,603.84 FROM RACE TRACK FUNDS

The Board of Allegany County Commissioners were advised yesterday that cities and towns in the county will share $33,382.41 and the county will receive $18,611.87 from the allocation of horse racing funds as provided under the legislative Acts of 1947. Cumberland will get $23,603.84.

Frostburg will receive $4,578.62; Westernport, $2,131.25; Lonaconing, $1,452.20; Luke, $590.66, and Midland, $558.94.

The allocations are based on the population as recorded in the 1940 census and per capita percentage. Cumberland's share was based on a population of 49,483 and a percentage.

Under the Acts of 1947, applications for shares in the race fund allocations must be accompanied by the levies showing amounts for maintenance of streets, sewage, garbage collections and disposal.

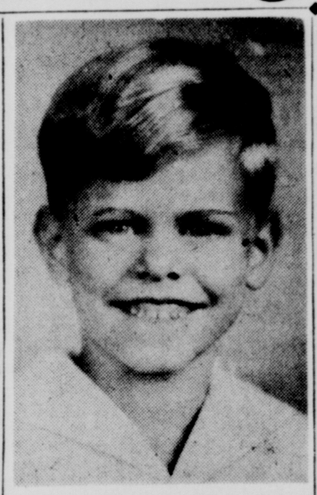
Authorities Continue Probe Of Kerns Case

Hampshire County, W. Va., authorities report there seems to be definite evidence that Nelson Kerns, 40-year-old Hampshire County farmer, who was admitted to Memorial Hospital, Winchester, Va., Monday for treatment of a broken back was run over by a car and said they are continuing an investigation to determine whether or not the man was beaten prior to the accident.

Trooper F. H. Tribett and Sheriff C. H. Parsons, Romney, went to Winchester Thursday to question Kerns on the circumstances, but were unable to secure any information since surgeons there were preparing to place the man in a cast.

Authorities said the man's physician advised them that Kerns suffered a cracked vertebra and that the muscles were torn loose about five other bones. They said his general condition was fair.

Kerns, who was found lying in a ditch near his home on Bloomery Hollow Road early Monday morning, told authorities he had been struck by a car Sunday at 9 a. m. and lay unconscious until daybreak that morning and was unable to summon help then since he was unable to move.



POLIO VICTIM — James Alan Morris, Jr., 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Morris, 565 Patterson Avenue, died yesterday afternoon en route in the State Police ambulance to Sydenham Hospital, Baltimore. The child was the third in the county to be stricken with infantile paralysis within the past month.

Cloudburst Sidelights

Piles of loose dirt excavated on Wills Mountain in connection with sewer and road construction in Roeder's Addition atop the mountain were washed down Piedmont Avenue onto the B. and O. tracks, Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, reported.

The heavy rain caused ballast and cinders from the B. and O. tracks to wash down Baltimore Street, and a water mark four inches above the pavement was visible on a brick building at the intersection of Frederick and North Centre Streets.

Most of the calls to the Street Department office concerned flooded basements in Baltimore Street stores, but the office was notified that cellars were flooded in four homes at the head of North Mechanic Street.

North Liberty Street was roped off for about an hour when water filled the street from curb to curb from a flooded sewer near the Liberty Theater. Two small boys, minus shoes and socks, stood ankle deep in the water to watch a crew clearing the street.

Four inches of water was reported in the basement of the Public Safety Building, and about two inches of water covered the basement floor of the City Hall. The Health Department reported that equipment stored in the basement for clinics was apparently undamaged.

One of the freakish incidents resulting from the storm occurred when water from a clogged sewer of Pershing Street backed up in a telephone conduit and a steady stream poured out of a junction box in the basement corridor of the Post Office Building. The main switch box was not affected, however.

City Hall employes chuckled when an excited woman called to report a flooded basement in a Baltimore Street store and then asked "Is this a cloudburst?"

Some young women, not wanting to wet their shoes or their hose, calmly removed their shoes and stockings and walked, unperturbed, across Baltimore Street when the water was at its deepest.

Three Motorists Face Reckless Driving Counts

Three motorists will be given hearings on reckless driving charges as the result of a motorcycle-auto collision at the gate of the Celanese plant yesterday morning at 7:40 o'clock, Maryland State Police said.

Trooper Walter Wilt said James W. Hill, operator of the motorcycle, collided with a car driven by Leonard M. Kemp, as Kemp swerved to avoid striking a Cumberland and Westernport Transit Company bus that was turning in the gate. The bus driver was identified as Robert Leo Thompson, Frostburg.

None of the drivers were injured, Trooper Wilt said, and damage to the right fender of the car amounted to approximately $50. The hearings will be held before Magistrate Roy Bowman, Cresaptown, September 2.

Parade And Carnival Will Climax Ridgeley Homecoming Celebration

Knobley Mountain Post No. 136, American Legion, will climax its three-day homecoming celebration in honor of the 400 World War II veterans of the Ridgeley, W. Va., area tonight with a parade and street carnival.

The parade, the first to be held in Ridgeley since 1940, will include at least five musical organizations and some two dozen patriotic and volunteer fire groups of this area.

Karl G. Brant, vice-commander of the 215-member post, will be marshal of the parade which will form on Main Street at the city limits. Led by a Marine Corps color guard, the parade, beginning at 7 p. m., will march down Main Street, turn left to Potomac Street and continue to the vicinity of the Legion Hall.

Town officials in the vanguard of the parade will be Mayor Frank Magruder, Floyd A. Decker, Harry F. Kelso, Homer C. Borror, William C. Knieriem and George L. Edenhart, councilmen, and William L. Dailey, town recorder.

The color guard will be formed by Tech Sgt. Vernon Debnam, Marine recruiter, Sgt. Gail P. Northcraft, Cpl. Altie Lee Welsh and Cpl. C. J. Menoes.

Next in the line of march will be the drum and bugle corps of Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, followed by members of Company D, Fifth Marine Infantry Battalion.

Other musical organizations which will participate will be the Frostburg Arion Band; Fulton Myers Post No. 153, American Legion, Drum and Bugle Corps; and Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, Sons of the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps.

Volunteer Fire Companies from Thomas, W. Va.; Frostburg, LaVale, Flintstone, Md.; Hyndman, Pa., Beryl, Shaft, Paw Paw, Romney, W. Va., and Ridgeley will participate in the parade.

Units of the Army Recruiting service will also participate and several floats have been planned, including the Marine Corps float depicting the flag raising on Iwo Jima.

Judges for the parade will be Mayor Magruder and Fire Chief William Shuck, Ridgeley; Thomas R. Farrell, commander, and Thomas F. Conlon, of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, and Vernon E. Rankin, Keyser.

Games and refreshments will be provided for the old-time street carnival to be held in front of the Legion home following the parade. A musical program was held by the post Thursday night and a street dance followed the Sons of the Legion drum corps concert last night.

Wright's Crossing Flooded; Highway Traffic Blocked Over An Hour

Homes And Gardens Are Badly Damaged

FROSTBURG, Aug. 22—George's Creek, already swollen by rains of the past week, poured out of its banks following a cloudburst in this section this afternoon and flooded the lower section of Grant Street and the Grahamtown and Wright's Crossing areas, causing considerable damage to homes and gardens in the vicinity.

S. Groff Haverstick, official weather observer here, reported that 2.1 inches of rain fell in the period between 12:30 and 4 p. m., with the hardest downpour beginning about 2 o'clock and lasting for about 45 minutes.

George B. Hale, resident maintenance engineer of the State Roads Commission, said that near the intersection of the Klondyke Road near National where George's Creek is "ordinarily just a trickle," it looked like a river 150 to 250 feet wide.

In the vicinity of Borden Shaft water over George's Creek Boulevard reached a depth of two and a half to three feet, Hale estimated, and other observers said water was two feet deep at some other points.

George's Creek Overflows

George's Creek overflowed its banks in the upper Grahamtown section and water from the Welsh Hill district increased the volume of the stream, flooding the basement kitchens at the adjoining homes of Deputy Sheriff George Harris and Mrs. Hannah Offman at 149 and 151 Green Street. It overflowed on the highway at Yate's Corner.

As the water rushed downstream, surface water from the hillsides caused it to overflow on the highway between Red Gate and Wright's Crossing to a depth that stopped all traffic for nearly an hour.

The cellars at the homes of Fred Wilson and Upton McFarland were completely filled by the flood waters and those at the homes of William Plumer and John Ritchie were partly filled. Practically all the cellars in upper Grahamtown on Greene and Railroad Streets and the lower sections of Wright's Crossing were flooded, many for the first time since the properties were built.

From the sloping fields of the Arnold and Layman farms, overlooking the Grahamtown and Wright's Crossing sections and saturated with water from yesterday's rains, the water poured down on to the highway.

Buses of the C. and W. Transit Company were unable to move over the flooded highway for nearly an hour and occupants of trucks and cars blocked by the water left their machines and helped residents move household equipment from the cellars.

Practically all the flower beds and truck gardens in the area from Hanna's Service Station to the lower places of Wright's Crossing, including the gardens of Harold C. Carl and Charles Brown, who reside near the Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad Culvert at Wright's Crossing, were ruined.

Minor Damage Reported

In other sections of the outlying districts, a small creek overflowed its banks near the home of Mrs. Mabel Riley on Hope Road and washed rubbish and rocks over the highway below the Western Maryland Railway bridge in that section.

Other minor damage was reported from various sections of the community, and, for a short time, according to reports of passing motorists, the athletic field at Beall High School and strip mining pits in the Vale Summit section resembled miniature lakes.

At Frank Alexander's store at Borden's Shaft there was three feet of water and a hedge fence was removed to let the water drain off the property.

Ray Layman, Shaft, said there was six feet of water under the C. and P. Railroad underpass and Mrs. Walter Duncan, Shaft, reported water in her home.

A 30-foot Western Maryland Railway embankment at Carlos Junction was reportedly badly washed but it had been repaired later tonight.

The Midland baseball park lost part of its fence and the top soil was washed away.

Worst Flood In Years

Back in the Grahamtown and Wright's Crossing section, Mrs. Joseph Struntz and Mrs. Meacher, residents for many years in the vicinity, said they cannot remember ever seeing the water rush over the surface with such force and cannot recall having seen rain falling with such force.

While there was a hard rain in the Lonaconing section, the torrential downpour, according to reports, extended only about halfway between Midland and Lonaconing.

State Roads Commission crews at McCoole said only a light rain fell there.

George's Creek, however, flooded at Frostburg, came within inches of going out of bank at Lonaconing about 5 p. m., but had started receding four hours later. No damage was reported in that community.

Wastepaper To Be Collected Next Week

The first pickups in Cumberland's monthly paper collection will be made Monday in LaVale, Potomac Park, Bowling Green, Bedford Road from Nave's Crossroads to State Line and Baltimore Pike to Miller's Service Station, it was announced today.

The West Side will be covered on Tuesday and on Wednesday collections will be made east of Wills Creek and north of Baltimore Street and Baltimore Avenue.

Thursday's schedule will include the area between Baltimore Street and Avenue and Oldtown Road. The collection will be concluded Friday with pickups in the section south of Oldtown Road.

Cloudburst Hits Cumberland And Frostburg Areas

City's Business Area Flooded By Heavy Rain

County Roads Are Badly Washed; Rock Fall Is Reported At Quarry On Mt. Savage Road

A cloudburst striking at 1:40 p. m. flooded much of Cumberland's business section yesterday afternoon, badly washed some county roads and caused a fall of 3,000 tons of rock at the Corriganville quarry of the Cumberland Cement and Supply Company in which three men barely escaped with their lives.

Water flowed virtually from building to building on North Liberty Street and part of Pershing and Baltimore streets within minutes after the torrential downpour began.

Merchants in the business section affected said that from two to three feet of water poured into the basements of their stores, but none reported any damage.

At the Western Union office on Liberty Street, three to four inches of water covered the floor and about an inch covered the rear of Rand's drug store, flowing in a North Centre Street doorway. Water lapped at the Baltimore Street entrance of the same store.

Sewers Are Inadequate

The Liberty Theater reported two to three feet of water in the basement but the Fort Cumberland Hotel said outside gratings were plugged just in time to prevent the water from spilling into the basement of the hostelry.

At the bend on Pershinp Street just beyond the post office water reached from building to building and spilled into basements.

While traffic was never stopped on Baltimore Street, it moved slowly until the water receded in a comparatively short time.

Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, said the flood-like condition was caused by too much water for the city's storm sewers. He recalled a similar condition some 10 years ago.

Manhole covers were loosened in several sections of the downtown area from water pressure in overflowing sewers, and a street department crew begon clearing muck from streets in the business section as soon as the heavy downpour stopped.

The crew will continue working today until the main business streets are cleared and other city streets will be cleaned Monday. Corrigan said it may take several days to complete the job since it will be necessary to clean the muck and then flush the streets.

The Green Street subway was blocked completely for about half an hour and a taxicab, pickup truck and several other cars were stalled at times in the almost hip-deep water.

Roads Hard Hit

Albert S. Paye, county engineer, said county road crews are faced today with a "big job" of repairing county roads damaged to some extent by earlier hard rains and badly rutted in yesterday's storm.

While he had not been to the scene last night, Paye said roads east of Cumberland are "bound to have suffered heavily."

After his return from a survey trip through the Frostburg, Eckhart and Shaft sections, Paye reported the worst situation at Shaft and said he was informed water flowed two feet over the bridge there at the peak.

Road crews were put to hand work on some of the worst places after the storm and mechanical equipment will be moved in today to begin the repair job. Meanwhile, dangerous spots were marked with red lanterns as a warning to motorists.

George B. Hale, resident maintenance engineer of the State Roads Commission, reported the "biggest mess" for his crews to clean up was between Narrows Park and Corriganville although he said Georges Creek Boulevard was flooded and water covered Route 40 at Eckhart.

There was no serious damage to state roads, Hale said, and all were in "good shape" by 7:30 p. m. Conditions were so good, he added, that it was not necessary to post any warning lanterns.

At Corriganville three feet of dirt and stone washed on to the road near the bank side and tapered off to a lesser depth near the opposite edge of the road, Hale reported.

However, one-way traffic was possible for the short period before the debric was cleared away.

A lot of earth and rock washed off the mountainside at Eckhart, and rubbish washed out of backyards contributed to the general cleaning up job necessary, Hale said.

The Western Maryland Railway and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroads reported no damage here, but the B. and O. said a washout at Rockwood, Pa., tied up trains for 35 to 40 minutes.

Telephone Cables Affected

The Potomac Edison Company termed itself fortunate with "not a bit of trouble," but the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company reported water got into cables affecting 76 lines ond 176 telephones.

One of the cables was on Washington Street and another in LaVale while a third was a toll cable between Cumberland and Frostburg which put four to five lines to Piedmont, W. Va., out of order.

The official weather observer reported only .72 of an inch of rain fell at the measuring station in Constitution Park, but observers of the storm downtown said the fall in the business section and some other parts of the city probably was closer to the two inches that fell at Frostburg.

Yesterday's maximum temperature was reported at 85 degrees and the forecast for today calls for continued humidity,, not much change in temperature and more thundersowers.

Three Stone Quarry Workers Have Narrow Escape As Rain Loosens 3,000 Tons of Rock

Three thousand tons of rock loosened by a torrential rain rolled down the side of Wills Mountain, and tore through the quarry of the Cumberland Cement and Supply Company yesterday afternoon causing damage that may amount to $3,000.

Three employes at the quarry, located about half way up the mountainside, narrowly escaped with their lives when the bulk of the rock missed the buildings in which they were working.

David C. Martin, 330 North Mechanic Street, manager of the quarry operation, said Lester Christner, about 24, Meyersdale, Pa., and Robert Whitehair, about 25, Homewood Addition, fled from the grinding room where they were working and ran through the path of the avalanche, miraculously escaping unhurt although they were covered with mud.

Runs To Safety

John Seeders, about 21, Corriganville, was working in the secondary crusher house when an empty oil barrel slammed through an open door and landed beside him.

Mud poured into the entrance but the plummeting rocks plunged past the side of the building, Martin said. Meanwhile, Seeders ran across the path of the rock slide to safety and he escaped without injury.

Martin was working in the shop about 50 feet away and had just noticed about 18 inches of water covering the road during the downpour when he heard a noise "like the whole mountain let loose," he related last night.

He said he endeavored to attract the employes' attention but the first "spurt" of rock hit before he succeeded.

Martin said the rumble of the rock fall was like nothing he had ever heard before.

He said the avalanche started at the top of the mountain, apparently as a result of water backing up in rock fissures, fell the 500 feet to the quarry site and continued to a Western Maryland Railway sand siding another 300 feet below.

The Western Maryland said the siding will be out of service until sometime today when clearing operations will get underway.

Coming in three "spurts," the avalanche lasted close to 20 minutes, Martin related.

He said the rock, some of it huge boulders, seemed to roll first and then torrents of water gushed over it.

Mud Covers Equipment

Mud and rock piled up to a depth of four and a half to six feet in front of the secondary crusher house and a small building housing a costly horsepower motor was knocked askew on its foundation. The foundation itself was knocked apart.

The motor, two stone grinders and washers were covered with mud, but the dirt was removed from the machinery after the avalanche ended.

Eight-by-eight pieces of timber were knocked 25 feet by the lesser part of the rock fall.

As the avalanche passed the quarry site, it split into two courses, cutting deep ravines into the mountainside and piling rock all along both courses to the railway siding.

Martin said the job of clearing up the mud and rock will begin today. He said the damage was not covered by insurance.

AVALANCHE SCENE—Some of the mud and rock that damaged the Corriganville quarry of the Cumberland Cement and Supply Company on Wills Mountain yesterday afternoon is pictured above. Four and a half to six feet of mud and rock fills the area between two crusher houses. John Seeders, about 21, Corriganville, an employe was working in the crusher house at the right when the fall of 3,000 tons of rock began, and he ran across the path of the fall to safety. Two other employes were working in a building in the rear of this crusher house and ran up a ravine cut by the rocks while the avalanche was still going on. They were unhurt. The bulk of the avalanche passed just beside and to the left of the building where Seeders was working. Water backed up in rock fissures was blamed for the rock fall.

Explosion Victim Lighted Cigaret, She Tells Police

Woman's Condition Is Still Serious

Police said yesterday that Mrs. Chester Erickson, 33, 138 Elder Street, injured in an explosion Thursday night told them she attempted to light a cigaret while lying on the kitchen floor "and doesn't remember anything after that."

Detective Thomas J. See said he questioned the woman, who Memorial Hospital attaches said still is in a "serious condition" briefly yesterday and will continue the investigation when she has recovered sufficiently to answer questions.

Police said that Erickson, who attended the races at Fairgo with his wife, was found sleeping in a car on Offutt Street after the explosion and had not gone to work as was first reported.

Two boys found Erickson, and told him of the blast which occurred in the kitchen and resulted in flash flames blistering woodwork and consuming curtains and blinds in the room, according to the detective.

Police said they also questioned Erickson shortly after he returned to the house, but he was too bewildered to talk.

Mrs. Erickson suffered first, second and third degree burns according to the hospital, and Clarence Thompson, 206 Elder Street, said that he turned off four jets on the gas stove after he and another neighbor broke down the door and entered the kitchen.

Steven Lawrence, 204 Elder Street, told authorities that when he arrived at the top of the outside stair case, leading to the four room apartment, he observed Mrs. Erickson crawling to the porch from a bedroom window. He said he assisted her and then sat her in an upright position on the porch.

Police said it appeared that the door leading from the kitchen to the bedroom must have been closed at the time of the explosion because wallpaper and other fixtures in the remaining three rooms were not damaged.

Mrs. Erickson told police, they said, that she does not remember "anything" after she struck the match to light her cigaret.

County Welfare Fund To Be Cut

J. Milton Patterson, director of the State Department of Public Welfare, advised the Allegany County Board of Commissioners yesterday that the county appropriation for state-aided cases has been reduced two per cent of $500 from the original grant of $25,000.

Patterson said the funds were reduced under a directive from the General Assembly which lopped $500,000 off state welfare appropriations at the last session of the legislature. He advised the commissioners the county will receive its grant on the original basis for the July-Setember quarter with the two per cent slash effective on subsequent dates.

Four additional bids for veterans' lots on Holland Avenue were received yesterday, but the Commissioners asserted some veterans may be disappointed because of failure to follow instructions in placing the bids.

In bidding for the lots, they said, the application must be accompanied by 10 per cent of the proposed purchase price. Some bids received to date did not follow these instructions.

Joseph F. Screen, Jr., 116 Arch Street, placed a bid of $420 for Lot. No. 11; Joseph W. Hogan, 324 Beall Street, seeks any lot but made no bid; Earl E. Davis, 820 Maplewood Lane, seeks Lot No. 30, and John S. Cook, this city, any one of Lots Nos. 3 to 9.

Bids will be acted upon at the meeting of the Commissioners next Friday, August 29.

Several persons appeared before the commissioners in regard to improvement to county roads.

The Allegany Liquor Control Board acknowledged a letter from the commissioners in which the latter group gave the opinion the board should pay its own operating expenses. It also advised the commissioners it would pay for chairs purchased for the board office.

Paper Workers Plan Meetings To Approve Pacts

Members of Luke Local 676, United Paperworkers of America, CIO, will meet this afternoon at 1:30 and 4:30 p. m. in the Piedmont Opera House for action on a new contract with the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company.

Union negotiators for locals at the Luke, Williamsburg, Pa., and Covington, Va., plants announced in a joint statement yesterday that they will recommend ratification of the proposed contract agrement.

The company and union, at a meeting in Washington, D. C., late Thursday night signed an agreement covering all issues except wages. Membership action will be taken at:

Williamsburg, Sunday, at 12:45 and 7:30 p. m., at Eagles Hall.

Covington, Monday, at 7:30 p. m. at court house.

The joint union-company statement reads:

Since 1944 the management has studied a pension plan for hourly employes, the spokesman said. Up to date actuarial studies have been authorized and now are underway.

The pension plan has been a request of the union for the past three years.

Both parties agreed to withhold detailed terms until after ratification by union members, and it is planned to issue a joint statement Tuesday to cover this point.

CITY TO RECEIVE $26,603.84 FROM RACE TRACK FUNDS

The Board of Allegany County Commissioners were advised yesterday that cities and towns in the county will share $33,382.41 and the county will receive $18,611.87 from the allocation of horse racing funds as provided under the legislative Acts of 1947. Cumberland will get $23,603.84.

The allocations are based on the population as recorded in the 1940 census and per capita percentage. Cumberland's share was based on a population of 49,483 and a percentage.

Under the Acts of 1947, applications for shares in the race fund allocations must be accompanied by the levies showing amounts for maintenance of streets, sewage, garbage collections and disposal.

Authorities Continue Probe Of Kerns Case

Hampshire County, W. Va., authorities report there seems to be definite evidence that Nelson Kerns, 40-year-old Hampshire County farmer, who was admitted to Memorial Hospital, Winchester, Va., Monday for treatment of a broken back was run over by a car and said they are continuing an investigation to determine whether or not the man was beaten prior to the accident.

Trooper F. H. Tribett and Sheriff C. H. Parsons, Romney, went to Winchester Thursday to question Kerns on the circumstances, but were unable to secure any information since surgeons there were preparing to place the man in a cast.

Authorities said the man's physician advised them that Kerns suffered a cracked vertebra and that the muscles were torn loose about five other bones. They said his general condition was fair.

Kerns, who was found lying in a ditch near his home on Bloomery Hollow Road early Monday morning, told authorities he had been struck by a car Sunday at 9 a. m. and lay unconscious until daybreak that morning and was unable to summon help then since he was unable to move.

Homes And Gardens Are Badly Damaged

FROSTBURG, Aug. 22—George's Creek, already swollen by rains of the past week, poured out of its banks following a cloudburst in this section this afternoon and flooded the lower section of Grant Street and the Grahamtown and Wright's Crossing areas, causing considerable damage to homes and gardens in the vicinity.

S. Groff Haverstick, official weather observer here, reported that 2.1 inches of rain fell in the period between 12:30 and 4 p. m., with the hardest downpour beginning about 2 o'clock and lasting for about 45 minutes.

George B. Hale, resident maintenance engineer of the State Roads Commission, said that near the intersection of the Klondyke Road near National where George's Creek is "ordinarily just a trickle," it looked like a river 150 to 250 feet wide.

In the vicinity of Borden Shaft water over George's Creek Boulevard reached a depth of two and a half to three feet, Hale estimated, and other observers said water was two feet deep at some other points.

George's Creek Overflows

George's Creek overflowed its banks in the upper Grahamtown section and water from the Welsh Hill district increased the volume of the stream, flooding the basement kitchens at the adjoining homes of Deputy Sheriff George Harris and Mrs. Hannah Offman at 149 and 151 Green Street. It overflowed on the highway at Yate's Corner.

As the water rushed downstream, surface water from the hillsides caused it to overflow on the highway between Red Gate and Wright's Crossing to a depth that stopped all traffic for nearly an hour.

The cellars at the homes of Fred Wilson and Upton McFarland were completely filled by the flood waters and those at the homes of William Plumer and John Ritchie were partly filled. Practically all the cellars in upper Grahamtown on Greene and Railroad Streets and the lower sections of Wright's Crossing were flooded, many for the first time since the properties were built.

From the sloping fields of the Arnold and Layman farms, overlooking the Grahamtown and Wright's Crossing sections and saturated with water from yesterday's rains, the water poured down on to the highway.

Buses of the C. and W. Transit Company were unable to move over the flooded highway for nearly an hour and occupants of trucks and cars blocked by the water left their machines and helped residents move household equipment from the cellars.

Practically all the flower beds and truck gardens in the area from Hanna's Service Station to the lower places of Wright's Crossing, including the gardens of Harold C. Carl and Charles Brown, who reside near the Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad Culvert at Wright's Crossing, were ruined.

Minor Damage Reported

In other sections of the outlying districts, a small creek overflowed its banks near the home of Mrs. Mabel Riley on Hope Road and washed rubbish and rocks over the highway below the Western Maryland Railway bridge in that section.

Other minor damage was reported from various sections of the community, and, for a short time, according to reports of passing motorists, the athletic field at Beall High School and strip mining pits in the Vale Summit section resembled miniature lakes.

At Frank Alexander's store at Borden's Shaft there was three feet of water and a hedge fence was removed to let the water drain off the property.

Ray Layman, Shaft, said there was six feet of water under the C. and P. Railroad underpass and Mrs. Walter Duncan, Shaft, reported water in her home.

A 30-foot Western Maryland Railway embankment at Carlos Junction was reportedly badly washed but it had been repaired later tonight.

The Midland baseball park lost part of its fence and the top soil was washed away.

Worst Flood In Years

Back in the Grahamtown and Wright's Crossing section, Mrs. Joseph Struntz and Mrs. Meacher, residents for many years in the vicinity, said they cannot remember ever seeing the water rush over the surface with such force and cannot recall having seen rain falling with such force.

While there was a hard rain in the Lonaconing section, the torrential downpour, according to reports, extended only about halfway between Midland and Lonaconing.

State Roads Commission crews at McCoole said only a light rain fell there.

George's Creek, however, flooded at Frostburg, came within inches of going out of bank at Lonaconing about 5 p. m., but had started receding four hours later. No damage was reported in that community.

Cloudburst Sidelights

Piles of loose dirt excavated on Wills Mountain in connection with sewer and road construction in Roeder's Addition atop the mountain were washed down Piedmont Avenue onto the B. and O. tracks, Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, reported.

The heavy rain caused ballast and cinders from the B. and O. tracks to wash down Baltimore Street, and a water mark four inches above the pavement was visible on a brick building at the intersection of Frederick and North Centre Streets.

Most of the calls to the Street Department office concerned flooded basements in Baltimore Street stores, but the office was notified that cellars were flooded in four homes at the head of North Mechanic Street.

North Liberty Street was roped off for about an hour when water filled the street from curb to curb from a flooded sewer near the Liberty Theater. Two small boys, minus shoes and socks, stood ankle deep in the water to watch a crew clearing the street.

Four inches of water was reported in the basement of the Public Safety Building, and about two inches of water covered the basement floor of the City Hall. The Health Department reported that equipment stored in the basement for clinics was apparently undamaged.

One of the freakish incidents resulting from the storm occurred when water from a clogged sewer of Pershing Street backed up in a telephone conduit and a steady stream poured out of a junction box in the basement corridor of the Post Office Building. The main switch box was not affected, however.

City Hall employes chuckled when an excited woman called to report a flooded basement in a Baltimore Street store and then asked "Is this a cloudburst?"

Some young women, not wanting to wet their shoes or their hose, calmly removed their shoes and stockings and walked, unperturbed, across Baltimore Street when the water was at its deepest.

Three Motorists Face Reckless Driving Counts

Three motorists will be given hearings on reckless driving charges as the result of a motorcycle-auto collision at the gate of the Celanese plant yesterday morning at 7:40 o'clock, Maryland State Police said.

Trooper Walter Wilt said James W. Hill, operator of the motorcycle, collided with a car driven by Leonard M. Kemp, as Kemp swerved to avoid striking a Cumberland and Westernport Transit Company bus that was turning in the gate. The bus driver was identified as Robert Leo Thompson, Frostburg.

None of the drivers were injured, Trooper Wilt said, and damage to the right fender of the car amounted to approximately $50. The hearings will be held before Magistrate Roy Bowman, Cresaptown, September 2.

William Stump, 53, Springfield, W. Va., who was admitted to Memorial July 31 for treatment of head injuries West Virginia State Police said were suffered in a fight at Milleson's Mill, near Springfield, was reported fairly good last night. State police said they were informed the man suffered a blood clot on the brain.

SIX NEGROES ARRESTED AFTER "FREE-FOR-ALL"

Four negroes were jailed, and two others paid fines yesterday as a result of what police described as a "free-for-all over a stolen watch" in which 25 men participated at 12:30 a. m. in an alley adjacent to Hammersmith's Restaurant, Queen City Pavement.

Investigating officers said the six were arrested after the 25 negroes created a general disturbance in the alley, and added witnesses told of flying brickbats before police arrived.

The four men who were jailed in default of $10 fines were booked as Clarence Jackson, Donald Briscoe and James Lee, all of Hagerstown and Ernest Tate, Charleston, W. Va.

Police said they were called to the scene of the fight shortly after midnight but said many of the negroes participating in the fight fled when they were informed that authorities had been called. Most of the persons engaging in the fight were out-of-town residents here for the races, according to police, who said they were told the fight started when an unidentified man declared his watch was taken.

A man booked as E. Roach, Mapleside, was fined $5 on a drunk and disorderly conduct charge. "He went on a rampage and broke a number of dishes at a local home," officers said they were told.

Bond Action Puzzles County Commissioners

A letter requesting clarification was sent to the Chief deputy comptroller yesterday by the Allegany County Commissioners after the state returned bonds for the county's trial magistrates with the explanation that $5,000 was too much.

The commissioners were puzzled because the law specifically states that amount for magistrates and $1,000 for justices of the peace.

Apprehended for exceeding 30 miles per hour on Route 40 on August 8, Leonard H. Dibert, Route 2, this city, forfeited $6.45 bond in Trial Magistrates' Court yesterday. State Trooper Robert Henline arrested the man.
